Millions Protest Viet War

★ ★ ★

End the War Or We Will —Protesters

One of the most brilliant and penetrating social critics and satirists in American journalism today, the Washington Post's Nicholas Von Hoffman gives this interpretation of the Moratorium on the Vietnam War which is receiving support from millions of his young, middle-aged and elderly fellow-countrymen today.

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

I've been asked to make speeches at a number of places today. I can't because I have to work. I think that everyone should refrain from working if he can; the two exceptions should be medical personnel and newsmen. If I had spoken, this is what it would have said:

The Moratorium isn't a protest. It's an ultimatum by an enormous section of the population laid down to its politicians. That ultimatum says there is no time left. It says there's no more credibility gap because there's no more credibility. It's an ultimatum that says either end the war forthwith or we will stop it ourselves.

That's not what the politicians want to make of this day. A man like Congressman Rogers C. B. Morton, the Republican national chairman, would have you believe, "I'm for the Moratorium as part of our right to assemble."

• • •

That's not what the Moratorium is about. The right to petition a government that rejects petitions before they're laid before it is a sterile right. It's using the forms of political process to frustrate their purpose. It's a con, a fancy way of saying, "You go ahead and exercise your God-given constitutional rights to be ineffectual while we go ahead and run the war."

Even before the McCarthy campaign, hope in the right of petition dies. On its better days the government rejected politics with the contention that the Rostows and Kissingers knew more and knew better. They know noghing, but that's another story. On its worst and more ordinary days, the government responded by tricks and falsifications ... pull out 3,000 men here, hide them under palm trees there, don't bomb this but bomb that, invent another round of fictitious secret peace talks, run and cry on U Thant's shoulder, get the Pope to hold your hand.

• • •

Now comes Sen. Fred Harris, the Democratic chairman, saying, "It's time to take the gloves off on the Vietnam war issue. It's nine months since the president took office." It was time to do that in Chicago, August 1968, when the senator and his friends kept the Democrats a war party and drove the Clean Gene kids and a lot of other people out of electoral politics. Today he wants to be a peacenik because he has a dawning fear that the people have had it up to their gezuk with this perpetual tragedy.

Every aspect of government, all three branches, have failed but not all men in government. Former Senators Morse and Gruening are charter members of the opposition. Fulbright may have helped vote us into this war and into the set of policies which make such conflicts as inevitable as they are recurring, but he's said he was wrong, unthinking and gulled.

We must accept that. This is no longer a small protest movement, and it's bad to get into the silly, pursist radical bag of refusing to associate with anybody whose anti-war credentials are dated after 1964. This war has taught all of us many awful things about ourselves and our country. It's not just Sen. Fulbright who had to learn the hard way.

• • •

But if the few respectable men in high office could make such terrible mistakes, then the question is who should lead? Many speakers today will say the politicians, chastened, humbled, made honest and sensitive to the death of their constituents' sons and the voters high taxes. Don't you believe it. Don't let them steal the movement away.

The strength of the peace movement is its leaderlessness, the way it can survive and grow on a consensual process which is as easy to see as it's hard to describe with exactitude. Let the movement continue to be led as it has, by its adherents, by small groups of people proposing an

Canada, Vatican Exchange Envoys

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Canada and the Vatican have established diplomatic relations at ambassador level, the Vatican announced today.

The announcement said the decision to establish diplomatic relations followed the desire of Canada and the Holy See "to promote already existing friendly relations."

Prime Minister Trudeau initiated the move toward diplomatic recognition after calling on Pope Paul at the Vatican last January.

He said he told the pope that Canada was "considering the possibility of extending diplomatic relations to the Vatican."

Trudeau said the Pope responded he would "welcome such an exchange but would not press it in any way as it is up to us to judge what is the right step."

Shortly after Trudeau's visit President Nixon called on the Pope and later made known he was considering establishing relations or sending a personal representative to the Vatican.

Eventually he decided against either move, but said he would send cabinet members to the Vatican from time to time to maintain close contact.

Aid Experts To Help B.C.

By JOHN MIKA

British Columbia's very own foreign aid program, announced in last spring's budget and still gestating, will get some midwifery hints from the Colombo Plan experts gathering here.

The count of delegates who have arrived for the 20-year-old mutual aid organization's meeting here rose to more than 60 today, mostly technical staffs from 24 countries engaged in closed-door talks.

The delegation leaders and other international figures arrive next week and that's when B.C. officials plan to hold general discussions with some of them.

However, the most detailed talks will be with Maurice Strong, president of the Canadian International Development Agency and the leading expert fielded by this country.

EARNED $225,000

The reason provincial officials are interested in the international meeting—aside from helping with hosting arrangements:

The $5 million perpetual fund for overseas assistance created by Premier Bennett in February's budget now has accumulated about $225,000 in interest income and the time has arrived for transforming spending ideas into policies.

Bennett last spring said the fund should earn an average of $350,000 a year for spending purposes.

He said the fund would be "much like" Canada's program of aid to the Colombo Plan.

Primary purpose will be to pay for sending B.C. experts, most from within government ranks, to developing countries to train their personnel in the education and, particularly, agriculture fields.

A secondary purpose will be to provide emergency relief funds for helping victims of foreign disasters.

The perpetual fund was an outgrowth of the World Relief

Counter Signs Dot Country

Times News Services

Americans coast to coast stood up to be counted today as Vietnam Moratorium day produced mostly orderly demonstrations, vigils, marches and debates.

But not all of the countless thousands who took part were protesting the Vietnam war. Across the country the moratorium produced some counter-displays in support of the U.S. military role in the war.

Demonstrations in Canada were few and there were no incidents locally. In Ottawa, about 50 people patrolled outside the U.S. Embassy with signs supporting the war protest.

Soldiers Wear Armbands

South of the border, major developments among moratorium supporters:

● Manhattan's city hall was draped in black on orders of Mayor John Lindsay. Many people wore black armbands and buttons in support of the peace day.

● At Washington's National Cathedral, clergymen offered prayers for peace every hour on the hour.

● Half of 30 troops in a combat platoon in Vietnam went on a mission wearing the black armbands.

Among incidents across the country in opposition to the moratorium:

● New York firemen defied Lindsay's proclamation and fire hall flags were not at half-mast.

● In Philadmelphia, a transit operator draped his buses and trolleys with flags, claiming it was time citizens stood behind their country and stopped complaining.

Lists of Victims Read

Lists of Americans killed in Vietnam were read in several places—ranging from the steps of the administration building at Ohio State University in Columbus to Trinity Church in New York City's Wall Street financial district.

Students handed out moratorium and peace literature at Harvard Square in Cambridge, Mass., rallying point for a march to Boston Common. A 70-foot banner reading "Peace" was stretched across one street.

Economist John K. Galbraith, Canadian-born professor at Harvard University, told a rally of about 1,000 persons at the Harvard Business school he thinks ending the war now would bring the U.S. military establishment under control. Galbraith is a native of Iona Station, Ont.

Among those listening to Galbraith was George Cabot Lodge, son of Henry Cabot Lodge, chief U.S. peace negotiator in the Paris talks on Vietnam. The younger Lodge is an instructor at the business school.

Opposition to the moratorium, surfaced in many areas. Merritt H. Taylor Jr., president of the Philadelphia Suburban Transportation Co., draped his buses and trolleys with U.S. flags to

Nixon Backers Cut Off Debate

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Nixon administration supporters foiled an attempt by congressional opponents of the Vietnam war Tuesday night to keep the House of Representatives in session all night as a prelude to today's Moratorium Day protest against the war.

The House held a wide-ranging debate on the war, but after just two hours of actual debate, the Nixon forces cut off the arguments by voting 112 to 110 to adjourn. Almost half the membership was missing.

Dovish members of the House strongly criticized American involvement in the war and the Saigon government, and called for a speedy withdrawal of U.S. troops.

But what they had planned to be a series of set speeches with interjections by sympathetic colleagues turned into a major debate when Republican leaders and congressmen rose to defend the administration before the crowded public galleries.

The organizers had conceded in advance that they would probably fail in their efforts to continue the session until noon, when the House normally meets for its regular business. The motion to adjourn was passed at 11:16 p.m., on the fourth attempt by administration supporters.

The supporters said an all-night session might give the false impression that the majority of the House supported the moratorium.

After the session broke up, about 500 persons mainly young supporters of the moratorium, assembled on the steps of the Capitol building singing peace songs and chanting "We want peace now." No incidents were reported.

Ottawa Bans Seal Pup Hunting; Only 'Beaters' Will Be Taken

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will ban the hunting of seal pups in the Gulf of St. Lawrence next year, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis announced today.

The new policy means that only "beaters"—young seals three weeks to a month old which weigh up to 80 pounds—will be taken.

At a news conference, Mr. Davis acknowledged that the new regulations are at least in part a response to world-wide protests against the east coast seal hunt, mounted by humane societies and other organizations.

The ban will mean the end of hunting with clubs, an activity which humane groups have repeatedly complained about. The older seals, being more mobile, will necessitate the use of rifles.

Mr. Davis said negotiations are continuing with Norway with a view to agreement on a similar set of rules affecting the Labrador front.

Norway is the only other country which has been active in the northwest Atlantic harp seal fishery in recent years.

Canada will have jurisdiction over the Gulf of St. Lawrence next year through inland waters legislation now being prepared.

SEAL PUP
... an extra three weeks to live

However, its exclusive fishing limit extends only 12 miles off the coast of Labrador, and much of the seal harvest takes place beyond that point.

If a seal-hunting agreement were reached with Norway, Canada could take action under the Fisheries Act to regulate the operations of Canadian fishermen beyond the 12-mile limit.

However, Mr. Davis indicated such action would not be taken in the absence of an agreement with the Norwegians—which he said will not be achieved in time for next spring's fishery in any event.

The regulations announced today will not affect the total quota allowed by the fisheries department. It will remain at approximately 90,000 seals.

The beater seals are youngsters whose mothers have already left them. The name derives from the fact that they are ready to beat their own way northward.

They have shed the pure white coats that distinguish the younger seals. In the "white-coat" stage, the pups are still watched over by their mothers.

The Canadian hunt is confined solely to the taking of young seals.

Thet moritorium is purty Hanoi-ing t' Mister Nixon.

Somali Republic President Slain

NAIROBI Kenya (AP) — Dr. Abdirashid Ali Shermarke, president of the Somali Republic, was shot dead today by a man said to be wearing a police uniform. Radio Mogadishu interrupted its programs to broadcast the news.

The Somali Republic is on the eastern horn of Africa, bordered on the landward sides by Ethiopia and Kenya.

Shermarke had been president since June, 1967.

The republic, consisting of the former British Somaliland protectorate and the former Italian trust territory of Somalia, was set up July 1, 1960.

The broadcast announcement said: "Here is a tragic report: It concerns the president of the Somali Republic, Dr. Abdirashid Ali Shermarke. He was shot dead today at 1 p.m. in Las Anod by a man wearing a police uniform. The man is now under police custody."

Las Anod is in the northern part of the country, not far from the Ethiopian border.

Fund the premier established five years ago with a one-shot $50,000 budget which was fully spent by this year.

B.C. is feeling its way slowly with the new venture because it will be breaking new ground by entering the area of foreign technical assistance. Manitoba announced such a program several years ago but it never was implemented.

Although the provincial decision to enter this field and siting of the Colombo Plan meeting here for its first time outside of a national capital were not related, B.C. officials regard it as a "very happy coincidence" which could help their own planning.

"We think it's a unique opportunity for us," said deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace. "We'll know more about this after the conference is over."

Wallace, who was involved with the World Relief Fund and is a member of a special technical committee on the perpetual fund, is an official member of the Canadian delegation to the conference.

WINDFALL

Deputy agriculture minister Alex Turner, chairman of the provincial technical committee on foreign assistance, also said the conference was a windfall "and we will have some general discussions with some of the delegates while they are here."

Both, however, emphasized, that planning for the province's venture has been proceeding independently of the conference for some time.

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford, chairman of the cabinet committee supervising the B.C. fund, is out of town until Oct. 27 but it is expected he will meet several delegates before the Colombo Plan conference breaks up Oct. 31.

Abductor Eludes Police

CHASE (CP) — Police said today they have been unable to track down a man who abducted two teen-age girls Saturday in this area 180 miles northeast of Vancouver.

Heather Claire Casey, 19, of Winnipeg, was freed from the car shortly after the man drove up a deserted gravel road. The man later freed Leslie Ann Brown, 18, of Sarnia, Ont., as police moved in.

Neither of the girls was harmed, police said, although the man grabbed Miss Brown's leg to hold her in the car. He pushed her out when he saw headlights of an RCMP car, called by Miss Casey.

Neither girl was able to give a close description of the man or the car. But, police said: "We think he is familiar with the area. He lost us on all the old logging roads in there."

The girls were hitchhiking to Vancouver and continued their trip Sunday.

Frogmen Sink Ship

SAIGON (Reuters)—The Panamanian registered cargo ship Getley was blown up and sank with the loss of five lives in Nha Trang Harbor today, a South Vietnamese military spokesman said. The explosion occurred when Viet Cong frogmen planted a mine on the side of the 1,260-ton vessel, the spokesman said.

BISHOP SHEEN TO RETIRE

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Pope Paul has accepted the resignation of the Most Rev. Fulton J. Sheen as bishop of the Rochester Roman Catholic Diocese, it was announced today.

Bishop Sheen, 74, will be succeeded by Rt. Rev. Joseph L. Hogen, 53, pastor of St. Margaret Mary's Church in Rochester.

No reason for the retirement was announced immediately.

Go-Ahead Given Fairburn Work

The awarding of a contract for an addition to Fairburn Elementary on Fairburn Drive Tuesday as been approved by the treasury board.

Bids on the estimated $433,000 project were opened in September, and Herb Bate Ltd. had the lowest bid, $449,446.

The Fairburn addition was part of a total of $710,814 in school construction approved by the board for the McBride, Skeena-Cassiar, Shuswap and Greater Victoria districts.

The Fairburn addition will include an administrative area, 12 classrooms, a kindergarten, library and the second half of an activity room.

. . . STOP THE WAR, SAY PROTESTERS

idea and testing it by seeing who and how many will come in with them on it. That's how this Moratorium was started. Six months ago a few of the former McCarthy people anticipated that Whoziz was as trustworthy as his predecessor when he said he had a plan for ending the war. They judged that by October we would be ready for the Moratorium. They were right. Today we put black crepe on our arms and refrain from work.

That will not be enough to end the war. We may get something out of it. Hershey's already been tossed to us, although what we're supposed to do with the old flesh trader is a puzzle. Maybe Hoover'll be given to us next, but these ancient bonbons have lost their sweetness. If we're very lucky, they'll give us some tinsily cease-fire while they sneak a secret war in Laos. The government should not be permitted to keep a single soldier in those parts, but to get them out we must do more than today.

In fact today is a preparation for more. November the 15th is already being planned as a march on Washington. Today is a day of accustoming great numbers of people to the anxiety of standing up to their government. Even in a country like ours where there are civil liberties, great strain still attaches to exercising them. We were all brought up trusting the government; it's hard to shake off the feeling that resistance to it, especially about a war, is a form of social treason. The Moratorium will make people comfortable in their new roles of resistance. It will make opposition socially acceptable, perhaps even stylish.

This isn't by design but is dictated by the probable course of events. Either the war must end or the resistance must grow and take tougher forms. The fact will not be clear in most of the talks given today because they'll be given by summer-soldier politicians who will want to felicitate everyone on their orderly, good conduct; they will praise their audiences for the lawful and constitutional manner by which they express their hatred of this lousy war. That's alright. Only imbeciles prefer street brawling and law breaking to orderly political process, but that's not the point.

The point is that there would never have been a Peace Movement if it had remained law abiding in the government's eyes. The peace movement is where it is because people broke into draft boards and threw blood on the files or got their heads beaten standing in front of induction centers or, like Capt. Howard Levy, took a court martial and a jail sentence.

They dramatized the war's nature. They forced the rest of us to go back over the record and check to be sure there was some pausible justification for taking human lives as we were doing. They did more. When they faced their judges and pleaded innocent by virtue of Nuremburg, they reminded us that we're individually responsible for what's done in our names. Our government, our armies, our taxes, our napalm, our soldiers, our young men.

Their example shows that an action like the Moratorium isn't an event in itself but the preparation and the threat of more and wider action. Even now what started out to be a sedate moratorium is inching in the direction of a general strike. It hasn't reach that point yet, but it will unless the government capitulates to its citizens.

But What's- His-Face, the furtive and fugitive president who darts from TV station to armed compound, doesn't know that; he doesn't know that if he keeps it up, by spring the country may be ungovernable. He says he won't be the first American president to lose a war, when what he risks is becoming the first president to lose America.

Maybe today he will read the ultimatum correctly and understand that playtime is over. That there is no patience left for Henry Cabot Lodge, Ellsworth Bunker and more diddlybop about bugging out, leaving allies in the lurch or saving the state department's occidental face.

People don't care if we bug out, run out, march out, stumble out, crawl out or fade out as long as we get out. They've had it, and the tumult and anger is spreading everywhere. Even the federal bureaucracy is threatening to take to the streets. It's no longer students or blacks; it's older people, businessmen, conservatives, liberals, anti-communists, pro-communists; it's everyone who knows that a perennial war that we have no will to win or even fight is insanity, that a democracy which carries on a war 40 to 50 per cent of the population detests risks destroying itself.

. . . MORATORIUM DAY express "a feeling of patriotism."

"I just think it's time the unheard element makes itself heard. We ought to stand behind our country and stop complaining so much."

Opponents of the demonstration also had urged motorists to drive with their headlights on and cars with lights burning were on roads and highways.

FIREFIGHTERS DEFY LINDSAY

Michael Maye, president of the Uniformed Firefighters' Association in New York City, said all flags on firehouses were flying at full staff and would stay that way—despite Mayor Lindsay's directive that city flags were to go at half staff after noon.

Campus demonstrations took a variety of forms. Students at Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge planted small white crosses on the Reserve Officers Training Corps parade grounds. They said the crosses symbolize the nearly 40,000 Americans killed in Vietnam.

Overnight vigils were held at several campuses, including 34,000-student Temple University in Philadelphia where 200 students remained sitting at dawn out of 500 who began the demonstration at midnight Tuesday night. By mid-day, between 700 and 1,000 students had gathered at a day-long vigil.

Twenty persons stood before a Vietnam war memorial on the Wyoming University campus in Laramie throughout the night despite three inches of snow and 15-degree temperatures

While observances generally began in a low-key manner, there was a brief flurry of excitement in Portland, Ore., when about 400 college-age youths blocked the entrance to the armed forces induction centre. A dozen helmeted police clashed with the demonstrators and one man was seized. Most centres personnel remained outside. Later, police rushed 30 inductees into the centre through a back door and seized another man in a scuffle.

FILES BURNED

Earlier, in Pittsfield, Mass., fire officials found a smouldering pile of draft files near an open file of 1-A registrations at the military draft board. Spokesmen said no important records were destroyed.

Leaders of the moratorium planned the day as a demand for immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam, but in the days before M-Day the protest was endorsed by some with more moderate views of how to end the fighting.

The World Council of Churches appealed from Geneva, Switzerland, to negotiators for both sides in the Paris talks to take fresh steps for an immediate ceasefire.

TRADING CONTINUED

A group calling itself the New York Stockholders for Peace appealed to the Board of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange to halt trading. But trading went on.

And some students from Clark University in Worcester, Mass., said they had sent a telegram to the New York Mets asking them to cancel today's World Series baseball game with Baltimore Orioles. It, too, went on.

Award Slated

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce will name its "Man of the Year" for 1969 at an Oct. 22 luncheon in the Empress Hotel.

Last tear's presentation went to Ian Ross, president and managing director of Butchart's Gardens.

Speaker at the 12:15 p.m. meeting will be Ronald S. Ritchie, director of Imperial Oil Ltd.

YOUTH DENIES STABBING

A young Victorian was charged in family court Tuesday with assault, causing bodily harm.

Magistrate Harold Alder remanded him to Nov. 13 for trial after he denied stabbing another juvenile with a switch knife.

The incident took place during skating at Memorial Arena.

Russians Try Space Welding

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Two of Russia's seven earth-orbiting cosmonauts will carry out welding experiments in connection with the construction of space laboratories, the Soviet news agency Tass said today.

The disclosure was contained in an article by the agency's science correspondent, and followed the first official mention Tuesday night of the Soviet aim of building orbiting space laboratories.

But mysteries abounded as the three Soyuz spaceships continued in orbit more than 100 miles above the earth. The article did not mention when the welding experiments would be carried out or whether the cosmonauts would go outside to conduct them.

Nor was there official word on whether the seven in the spaceships will attempt linkups. It is widely believed that when joined together, Soyuz 7 and 8 would form the basis for a permanent space laboratory.

An announcement Tuesday night simply said the two crafts came close together, and the crew filmed and photographed each other. It added that data being collected was "essential for the solution of a series of problems in working out autonomous operations in the creation of long-term orbiting laboratories."

The Tass article said the experiments on welding in high vacuum and weightless conditions would be carried out by the crew of Soyuz 6—air force Lt.-Col. Georgy Shonin and civilian engineer Valery Kubasov.

Tass said:

"The assembly of space constructions, their repair and other work will necessitate the joining of metals. The joints may be either detachable ones or welded. To fulfil these jobs the cosmonaut-assemblyman must stay outside of the ship for long periods of time.

"Quite natrually, weightlessness will complicate the fulfilment of some, even the most elementary operations, especially those requiring revolving movements. That is why the method of joining parts with the help of bolts and nuts is hardly acceptable."

Tass said different welding methods will be used, including "electric beam or plasma arc," which would give the space welders "the possibility of using a single instrument to both join metals and cut them."

Dr. Konstantin Feoktistov, the scientist-cosmonaut who was on a three-man space flight in 1964, indicated today that the seven spacemen would not leave an orbiting platform or station in space this time. He told Tass the purpose of the flight "is to accumulate experience that will be very useful in the creation of orbital stations capable of functioning in space for long periods of time."

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLETT JR.

I have heard many people say that this summer in southern Arizona was the hottest in their experience. Some of them have lived in the desert for 50 years. It appears that the days were really hotter on the average and more humid than usual and, therefore, good cause for complaint.

After questioning many of the complainers, it was clear that they also felt the hot and unusually humid weather took all the extra energy out of them. They didn't feel like working and they felt more tired at the end of a working day, whether it was inside in air-conditioned rooms or outside on a service station's concrete driveway.

It is the prolonged heat that did it. People get fed up with the heat after a while and they long for colder weather. Their bodies perk up when the first cool nights arrive.

And by midwinter they are back to normal with plenty of cold-weather pep. There's no getting around it—heat knocks the steam out of most people.

Greater Victoria's Most Dangerous Intersections — Part 3

Douglas Street and Saanich Road intersection has seen 18 accidents this year. (This view is north on Douglas). Drivers running red light on Douglas or turning late on yellow light from Saanich are main reasons for mishaps. Tail-gating is cited as another problem and rear-end collisions are common. Unfamiliarity with the two-way left turn lanes can also cause accidents. Two persons in accidents at this intersection this year have been hospitalized.

B.C. Hydro Union Accepts New Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Office employees of British Columbia Hydro Tuesday announced acceptance of a two-year contract which will give 2,300 workers pay increases of at least 15.6 per cent.

Ron Bone, president of local 378 of the office and technical Employees Union, said an eight-per-cent increase is retroactive to April 1.

New scales go into effect Nov. 1 and increase by seven per cent April 1, 1970.

They range from a minimum of $324 to $346 a month for messengers to $936-$1,122 a month for rates analysts. Old rates ranged from $290 to $1,009.

Mr. Bone said about 150 employees covered by a construction supplement will receive increases of 17 to 22 per cent by April 1, 1970 and will be paid double time for overtime. Old figures were not given.

PARIS ENVOY IN QUEBEC . . .

'De Gaulle's Ottawa Policy Stands'

QUEBEC (CP) — A French government representative said Tuesday night the fact he is not going to Ottawa during his current visit to Canada shows that Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Quebec policy has not been changed by his successors.

Jean de Lipkowski, the French secretary of state for foreign affairs, was speaking at a news conference in the presence of Marcel Masse, Quebec minister of intergovernmental affairs.

Mr. de Lipkowski said French policy toward Quebec was placed in question by the visit, the first official mission to Quebec by a French minister since the election of President Georges Pompidou.

He said the Pompidou government turned down an invitation for a de Lipkowski visit to Ottawa because, in effect, it raised the question of Ottawa's monopoly over France-Quebec relations.

'APPROVED BY OTTAWA'

"We wanted to be clear and to show that there was no sudden change on our part, that the visit by the first French minister after the departure of Gen. de Gaulle would thus demonstrate that French policy has not changed."

Mr. de Lipkowski said direct contacts between French and Quebec ministers are authorized under the France-Quebec cultural and education agreements, both of which are approved by Ottawa.

"There is nothing new in this. They are indignant today about something they accepted in the past."

He said that "faced with this indignation" he wondered whether it was not a question of hoping "to put a damper on France-Quebec co-operation" after the departure of Gen. de Gaulle.

'NOT CONTRADICTORY'

He wondered aloud whether someone wanted to give the impression that Ottawa has exclusive jurisdiction over France-Quebec relations or "a monopoly over relations in France-Quebec co-operation."

Mr. de Lipkowski said it is no more scandalous for France to co-operate with Quebec than it was for Canadians of British origin to have co-operated in the past with Britain.

"We do not come here in a spirit of provocation or to create disorder or confusion. We consider that there is nothing contradictory in France-Quebec co-operation and good relations with Ottawa.

"It is up to Ottawa to consider that France-Quebec co-operation does not conflict with the good relations we would like to maintain with Ottawa."

Mr. de Lipkowski said Ottawa is not "out of bounds" for French cabinet ministers, who would visit the federal capital "if they have a precise subject to discuss."

Another French minister, Joseph Comiti, is expected today for a week-long visit involving a two-day meeting of administrators of the France-Quebec youth office. He will not visit Ottawa.

An announcement said the purpose of the Comiti visit is to plan with Quebec officials the youth exchange programs to be undertaken in 1970.

New French Quebec Visitor Not Planning Ottawa Stop

PARIS (CP-Reuters) — Dr. Joseph Comiti, French secretary of state for youth and sports, left Paris today for Montreal—the second French government representative to visit Quebec this month without visiting officials in Ottawa.

He is due to attend a meeting of the Franco-Quebec organization in charge of a youth exchange program which resulted in 2,000 young Frenchmen visiting Quebec and 2,000 Quebecois visiting France this year.

Comiti and Quebec Education Minister JeanMarie Morin are co-chairmen of the 16-man board of directors of the Office Franco-Quebecois de la Jeunesse, which is holding its twice-yearly meeting in Montreal.

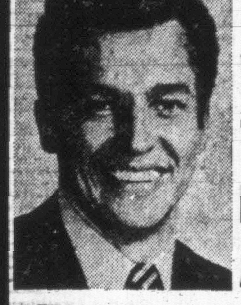

"We shall review the current program and prepare for next year's exchanges," Comiti told reporters before boarding his plane.

"I am glad to say that only 10 per cent of the youngsters were disappointed by their visits," he added.

Jean de Lipkowski, French secretary of state for foreign affairs, said the fact that he is not going to Ottawa during his current visit to Quebec shows that the French government has not changed its policy toward Quebec since the resignation of President de Gaulle.

More than 4,000 young French and Quebecois students, workers and technicians are due to take part in next year's exchange program.

Voice of the People?

THE COUNTRY-WIDE DEMONstrations and observances in the United States today in protest against continued American participation in the Vietnam war are of an impressive magnitude. Never in the United States has an anti-war—and anti-government—exhibition achieved a stature comparable with the mass excitement that in earlier days accompanied a declaration of war or the announcement of peace. Today's mass observance involves not only students and the sections of the population which might be expected to take part, but also many adult individuals and organizations, university faculties, businessmen and political figures.

The day's events will have importance for their specific objective: an early disengagement of United States forces from the Vietnam situation. And it is difficult to believe that President Nixon can hold entirely to his declared determination not to let the organized public outcry affect the government's policy. But quite apart from the immediate fact of the demonstrations and their effect on United States Vietnam participation, is the still larger question of the role of this type of expression of public opinion. Here is an unpredictable element injected into the democratic process and its impact and eventual influence could be great.

* * *

The traditional processes of the democratic system involve the free expression of individual opinion, the formation of committees or other bodies to give group support to such opinions, the holding of public meetings to place matters before the community and its elected representatives, the presentation of petitions, the sponsorship of candidates for office who support given policies, and finally the right to referendums and elections which will make clear the wishes of a majority of the people.

But the direct method of bringing pressure on the government by means of street demonstrations, mass rallies, patriotic observances of many kinds, is one that has been growing in frequency in a number of countries during the past decade. Coming particularly to wide public notice in the marches and other programs in support of Negro rights, the method has spread in the United States to embrace peace movements, youth movements and many other vehicles of protest.

While such demonstrations frequently are subverted by violence among those who need only an opportunity to run amok, they are increasingly being resorted to by more responsible citizens who see in them an outlet for direct and emphatic communication with government. A serious problem is thus posed, and it could be of watershed importance.

* * *

No government can effectively administer the affairs of a country by basing its actions primarily on the demands of street crowds, campus rallies and marches. But as these demonstrations increase in size and incorporate more and more of the responsible elements in the population, no government can remain aloof and unresponsive. The difficulty is to assess the degree to which the demonstrations legitimately represent the popular will, for presumably they will usually be staged by only a portion of the people.

This is the town meeting removed from the meeting hall and the control of a chairman and a modicum of parliamentary rules, and taken to the public squares and streets where excitement, emotion and often an electronically amplified demagogue are likely to be the major determinants of crowd action.

The streets are not likely to become a viable alternative for ballot boxes and considered decisions. But perhaps the rally is an inevitable result of the decline of indoor meetings, now that television has become a medium of direct communication between leaders and led. Democracy cannot thrive in a vacuum, or in individuals deprived of the sense of association derived from being one of an audience. If we are seeing the growth of a new sounding board for vox populi, then leaders both elected and appointed should seek to guide and employ it so that it will evolve in the best interests of democracy. It will be dangerous to ignore it, still more to reject it.

Time for Teamwork

ALTHOUGH THE VENTURE IS hidden in the usual Soviet official secrecy, the current simultaneous manoeuvring of seven Russian cosmonauts and four spacecraft appears to herald a multiple link-up of capsules and a start on the world's first space station.

If so, the Russian achievment will mark a long forward step in space exploration and development, for establishment of a launching platform outside of the atmosphere and beyond the main pull of the earth's gravity is said by many experts to be an essential preliminary to the transport of heavier cargoes to the moon and elsewhere in space.

The spectacular United States development of moon landings and on-the-spot exploration is equally a necessary part of man's thrust into the farther reaches of the solar system. Both types of program exhibit human courage and endurance, as well as high scientific and technological ability.

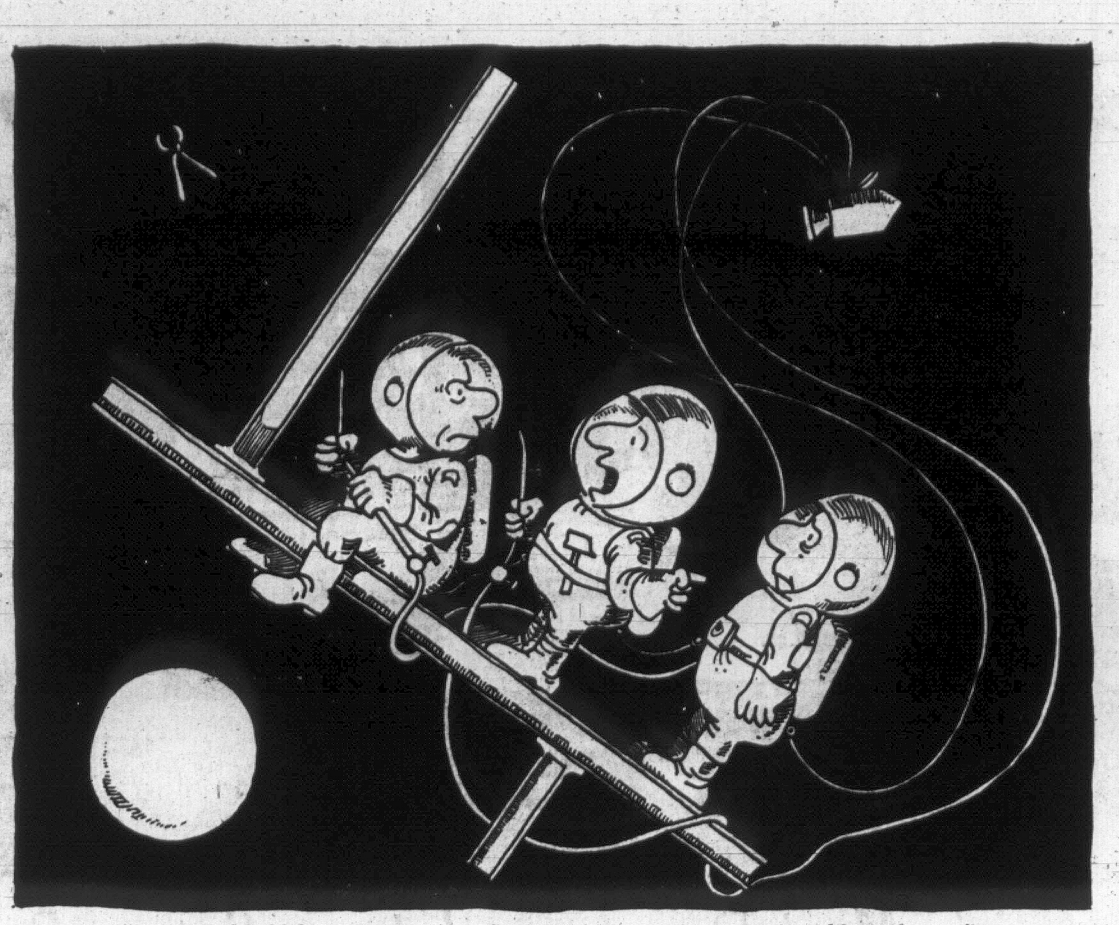

Given these two national programs, it is a pity that such complementary endeavors cannot be continued in a co-operative spirit rather than one of costly rivalry. There is much that each country can learn from the other. True science, which is said to observe no national boundaries, might in this instance help to overcome some.

A New Senate Image

IN CONTRAST TO THE CONventional talk of Senate reform, which keeps coming back like a yo-yo, is The Canadian Press report on a significant change that has occurred in recent times in the Red Chamber. Fighting the image of a retirement home for aging politicians, the Senate is, according to one observer, surging with new vitality. It is doing its committee work, providing the sober second thought for which it was designed in law making, and it seems to be energetically enthusiastic about getting down to work.

This should be highly encouraging to Canadians and should go a considerable distance to alter the public attitude which sees the Upper House as a comfortable pensioners' retreat for those who have labored in the partisan vineyard. Government Senate Leader Paul Martin sees a progressively more active and important role for the chamber.

So far, so good. But if the image is being altered, the mould appears to remain the same. And significant change can occur in the Senate only when membership is broadened. Whenever new senators are appointed, emphasis is laid on the contribution the new appointees have made to the country. By and large, good choices are made. Yet it is noticeable how often their merits happen to coincide with political affiliations linking them to the government in power. There are exceptions, of course, but they serve only to emphasize the exceptional in the general practice.

"... we should have known ... Comrade plumber has forgotten his tools ..."

FROM MONTREAL

By RICHARD PURSER

Angry, Frustrated Police, a Fearful Public

ONLY a week before Montreal's night of violence, October 7, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told graduates of the Quebec Police Institute that they must "make friends everywhere" as policemen. But Montreal police, much in need of friends, lost many of those they already had when they disappeared from the streets and left the city to the tender mercy of the dark forces that lurk in its sewers. It was grim to see the police themselves turn lawless, assembling en masse to scream defiance, waving placards calling for the mayor to be hanged, booing the chairman of the city's executive committee out of the hall, and finally turning on their own leader as a traitor when he told them in the end that the provincial government had won the first round and they would have to go back to work.

Purser

It was grim to see the city police turn against their own colleagues from the Quebec Provincial Police, who attempted to maintain some minimum of order while city police harassed them, hijacking their cars and then jumping on news photographers who photographed the incidents. There were moments when the definite possibility loomed of civil war between the two police forces.

Bertrand Warning

Etched on the mind here are the powerful words of Premier Bertrand, who said that when those professionals assigned by government to safeguard law and order themselves go against the law, "all authority must be taken away from them for the common good." There is no more unforgivable fault, he said, than the one now committed by the police before the eyes of those who scorn the very principles the police are supposed to apply.

In this era of confrontation, he said, "there are limits that even confrontation must not go beyond if we want democracy to continue."

This was not mere oratory. When Premier Bertrand made his plea to the National Assembly in Quebec after passage of the emergency legislation forcing police back to work, every member was acutely afraid that democracy in Quebec was under imminent threat.

The situation was so desperate that the government, without a peep of opposition from politicians of any political stripe, did things normally unthinkable in sovereignty-conscious Quebec—like calling in federal troops to act, if necessary, in a city under exclusively provincial jurisdiction. The troops are, in fact, on patrol in certain strategic locations such as the city hall and the city's main television transmitter — likely targets of the genuine revolutionaries whom the government believes surfaced, with some amount of organization, during the October 7 disturbances.

If the police had not obeyed the return-to-work order of the brutally severe Bill 61, and there were fears for some moments at the Paul Sauve arena that night that they might not, Montreal would be either in total chaos or under total martial law today. As it is, the city police are under provincial jurisdiction and the government is in no rush to hand authority back to the city administration. It wants to know why the city let its relations with policemen (and firemen) slip to where they now are, since the warning signs have been out for months.

Toronto Parity

Police frustration is total. Among policemen who will talk, there is no sign to be found that the force will ever accept the $8,480 salary (for first class constables with three years experience) granted by a supposedly legally binding arbitration board decision. They want $9,200, comparable with Toronto police salaries, and there is no telling what will happen if they do not get it after negotiators review the issue. City authorities are caught on the other horn of the dilemma — they don't want to appear to capitulate to illegal threats and actions.

But in this case, they may have no choice. Few citizens would deny, considering what police here have to face, they they deserve at least what their Toronto colleagues get. Even the head of the Toronto Metro Police Association agrees heartily with that, and police here were quite conscious of the virtues of inter-city police solidarity when they interrupted their noisy meeting to stand silent in memory of a slain Toronto officer.

Police here are bitter at the role they are increasingly forced into, of acting as balance of power between the forces of violence and the demand for order, between supporters of the status quo and militant reformers — a situation not uncommon in many cities of the United States, where the police have themselves tended to become a militant power in the absence of a clear understanding of their social role under new conditions. The city police have suffered nearly 300 injuries in five major disorders with revolutionary overtones since the Saint-Jean Baptiste Day riots of 1968. As the head of the Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood said:

"A feeling of apprehension has invaded Montreal — conditions are such that our men rightly become nervous when they are called out to riots."

Some order must be established in the Montreal situation, and it must include a decent restoration of police self-esteem as well as public confidence that authority will declare all-out war on the anarchist revolutionaries. They, in the words of one political leader, "are waiting for the day when they themselves, after having wrecked everything, will have the glorious opportunity of inflicting upon each of us a new kind of police of their choice" in what he called their "totalitarian democracy."

Levesque Blast

These were the words of separatist Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque, and they point up the danger of equating revolution with political separatism. Mr. Levesque since the Montreal disturbances has been loudly blasting leftist infiltrators in his own party, and union leaders who promote social conflict. Toleration of the conditions in Montreal, he said, would mean anarchy and the dislocation of all social organization.

It is hard to say what is most feared here: a leftist totalitarianism, or a rightist totalitarianism rising in reaction. The action of the Montreal mobs represents the former, the action of the police the latter.

Letters to the Editor

No Place But Up

Re the editorial of October 6, 1969, in reference to Jean Chretien:

The editorial is a clear indication of the lack of access to the public media to clearly put forth a fair assessment of the Indian peoples' point of view in reference to their own future.

I stand strong in my conviction that the Indian people of Canada are the ones who have been very patient in the light of new developments in Indian Affairs prepared by the Federal Government in isolation.

We have met with the Federal Government through their representatives over the last five years or more and the end result completely ignored the Indian peoples' priorities. It is political moves such as this and news media that blindly support such moves that force people to play the politics of the street and the threat that well meaning non-Indians may withdraw their support of Indian people is totally unfounded.

For well we know that if the Indian people lose their quest for justice, so will we all lose. What is on trial Mr. Editor, is British justice, not the Indian people and when you are on the very bottom, there is no place to go but up. — Chief Philip Paul, Tsartlip Band, Brentwood Bay.

Protest 'Trade'

The last executive meeting of the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association voiced a unanimous protest over the so called "trade" of Strathcona Park lands, for property at Cape Scott.

Being forced to accept the inclusion of Western Mines and subsequent pollution in the park area, it is sad to see further invasion arranged for, by the government. Surely here is failure to recognize priorities. Our parks are already priceless, and represent an irreplaceable heritage. Certainly they are not set aside simply for greedy eyes to evaluate the potential board footage available to industry. Availability and convenience to industry is poor excuse by the government, to whom we look for firm resistance to such pressures.

One wonders why announcement of this transaction was not released prior to the recent election, instead of after. — Mrs. H. R. Hanson, Publicity Chairman, TPNSA.

From the Times of Oct. 15, 1909.

Nanaimo has reorganized its women's hockey club and inter-city matches will be played with Victoria. The decision to reorganize the Nanaimo team was brought about through action taken by Victoria women's hockey club. I am sure this would be mutually beneficial."

Fall Gales Strike Nixon

By TIM TRAYNOR
From Washington

THE atmosphere here has turned distinctly sour as the Nixon administration moves into its first autumn. The president finds himself in deepening conflict with the thrust of radicalism as it manifests itself in the less-than-revolutionary Washington forum. The administration's congressional backers have turned aside challenges to its military procurement plans, but the fight seems to have sharpened rather than dulled the challengers' appetite for "anti-militarist" confrontation. They are once again bringing their zeal to bear behind demands for action to end the Vietnam war.

Traynor

In the background, a series of smaller-scale but nasty incidents mars the scene. Influential Senate Republicans as well as Democrats have lined up against President Nixon's court nominee, Clement Haynsworth, following criticism of his financial dealings and his less-than-liberal attitude to integration and labor unions. There is criticism of the administration's civil rights posture in general, following the easing of pressure for school integration.

The air has been further tainted by the Green Beret affair—the arrest, and subsequent release, of special forces officers on charges of murdering a Vietnamese agent alleged to have been working for the Communists.

The release — in which the president was involved — coincided with seamy revelations about racketeering in U.S. military bases overseas. The congressional probe into what has become known as the "khaki Cosa Nostra" case has brought into question the role of top-ranking army officers.

Fulbright Support

But the redoubled outcry against the Vietnam war overrides all else. The arch-exponent of withdrawal, Senator William Fulbright, is once again in full spate — under his chairmanship the influential Senate committee on foreign relations will hold hearings on the administration's Vietnam policy at the end of October. A number of influential figures announced support of the nation-wide anti-war demonstration today. The president's disdain for the protest, expressed at a recent press conference, seems only to have increased support for it.

There will thus be anything but a moratorium on discussions on Vietnam, despite the president's request that such a moratorium be observed for a 60-day period. The most strident advocates of withdrawal — Sens. Fulbright, Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern — have served notice they are no longer willing to rely on his assurance that he is resolutely executing a plan for withdrawing, and bringing the war to an end.

The new upsurge of anti-war activity reflects the cautiousness of Mr. Nixon's policy of Vietnamizing the war, and of his preliminary troop withdrawals. The policy does not square with rapid and total disengagement, to the dismay of those who favor such a course. The aim is to prod Mr. Nixon into further movement and, beyond that, to prevent him from shifting into a new posture involving continued commitment at a lower level.

A protracted struggle now seems likely, and its terms are becoming clearer. The most aggressive anti-war leaders are bending all efforts to bring the Paris negotiations to a head, paving the way for an agreement under which the U.S. will be able to terminate its commitment once and for all. There is open pressure for a squeeze on the Thieu-Ky regime of South Vietnam—the belief being that it constitutes the major obstacle to a settlement. It is thought that rapid withdrawals of large numbers of American troops might force South Vietnamese leaders into line; otherwise there would have to be a direct American move to oust the regime.

Rearguard Action

The administration has apparently not given up hope of an effective rearguard action which would preserve the conditions for a more advantageous settlement. The process of transferring ground combat responsibilities to the South Vietnamese forces might be carried through to the point where American forces remained in a support capacity only — a group of perhaps 200,000. If successful, this might mean a sharp reduction of American casualties, while maintaining South Vietnamese fighting capacity, and thus bargaining power.

The administration has refrained from plotting a precise course, but the trend of thought can be inferred from recent statements by President Thieu and Vice-president Ky. In an interview with U.S. News and World Report, Air-Marshal Ky said South Vietnamese forces should be in a position to replace all U.S. ground combat forces by the end of 1970.

From the tone of their statements, it is obvious that Mr. Thieu and Air-Marshal Ky are alarmed at the renewed anti-war drive. The critics are emboldened by opinion surveys, which show close to 70 per cent of the American public now feel the U.S. made a mistake in entering the war. The central question now is: To what extent will the public back Mr. Nixon in resisting the drive for rapid disengagement? The polls show he has his work cut out for him. According to one poll, only 35 per cent of those sampled approved his handling of the war in September. The Gallup poll figure was 45 per cent, increasing to 52 per cent after the announcement of the September troop withdrawals.

Guilt, Innocence Is Not the Issue

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

CHICAGO—No one here at the Great Conspiracy Trial thinks of its outcome in terms of guilt or innocence.

You are for the government or for the defendants.

This is in the nature of political trials wherein the specific accusation is either so vague it defies definition or is a technicality that has nothing to do with the reasons for bringing the accused into the dock.

At ordinary trials people regard the acts the defendants are accused of as crimes. They buzz and speculate about guilt and innocence. They say, "I'm sure he did it," or "I know he's innocent but he'll never convince the jury."

You don't get that here at the trial of the men who are accused of conspiring across state lines to cause the riot which was the 1968 Democratic convention.

Guilty or not guilty is immaterial. If you're for the government, you believe these eight men should be in jail and this is a way of putting them there.

If you're for the defendants, you don't believe there should be a trial. Or that maybe Johnson, Humphrey, McNamara, Westmoreland, and Daley ought to be the defendants.

●

Yet for all that, the forms of the law court endure. The color co-ordinated United States marshals — matching ties, socks and handkerchiefs — move about in impassive, tough neutrality.

The judge gets irritated when he picks up on the defence lawyers' implying their clients are as good as convicted, and that they are here only to make a record for the appeals court.

The forms of the law courts have power over even sophisticated and radical spirits. Neither cynical knowledge of the world nor bleakly correct social analysis can eradicate the last hope that there is justice in these forms, that some day the jury may come into this depressingly modern court room of aluminum louvers and undecorated functional appurtenances, that they may come in and say, "dammit, no!"

The defence feels the tug of this hope as much as the spectators. After all, the jury is there and listening. The eight defendants haven't simply been taken out and shot by the Green Berets or the CIA. There is a trial, there is a jury, there are these 12 people, sitting, listening. Every form must have some kind of function.

●

Whenever they can, the eight assert their faith in the jury, whom they talk about as surrogates for the whole people. Radicals must talk this way; whatever the radicalism, its advocates always say the people will vindicate them.

The defendants' faith in the jury is more than an ordinary generalization. They have faith in these 12 people as a jury, as an embodiment of an ancient form.

Thus, whenever the jury comes into the courtroom, the defendants and their lawyers rise in respect. The government prosecutors have caught onto this, and now they also get to their feet when the jury enters or leaves.

Since the judge has sequestered the jury in hotel rooms, the defence worries that this extended isolation will turn the 12 against them. They don't like the idea that perhaps for several months the jurors will be dependent upon the federal marshals for their food, entertainment, fetching their clothes from home, everything. The defence wouldn't feel this way if it didn't retain some hope that the trial is not totally rigged.

Yet faith in the forms of law is greatly strained. The defence and millions of its adherents believe the forms have been weakened by corruption and manipulation in service to the policies of the government.

Around here you will hear references to the Spock trial and the allegation that the justice department got the jury it wanted by doing a security check on some 5,000 prospective jurors.

Thus when the prosecution announced that the families of two jurors had received threatening letters from somebody signing himself "the Black Panthers," there was suspicion. It was immediately thought, though mistakenly, that federal agents had sent the letters to the two jurors most sympathetic to the defence in order to get them bounced out of the trial and replaced by more satisfactorily docile alternates.

●

It was astonishing how quickly non-radical spectators accepted the possibility the government was indulging in the crudest kind of jury fixing. A few years ago the same people would have laughed.

Confidence in the forms of justice depend on a minimal belief in the government's fidelity to its own rules. That confidence has been injured.

In the last ten years that belief has been betrayed too often. Go back to the missile crisis and remember the public relations man in the Pentagon asserting it's okay to lie in the public interest; go forward in time to the lies that were told Congress to get the Tonkin Gulf resolution.

●

An extraordinary number of people now think the government is no more reluctant than the Mafia to win a case by threatening a juror.

The very witnesses the government has begun to put on the stand impeach it. We've had the first of what promises to be a long line of plainclothesmen, undercover agents and FBI operatives.

You can't sit in the courtroom without speculating on how many thousands of people are paid full or part-time spies, political spies, dope spies, sex spies. A nation infiltrated, not by foreign agents, but by its own political antibodies, by a million sleazy, slightly tetched, functionally illiterate undercover men.

The attorney general of the United States declares electronic voyeurism is necessary to the security of the state. Every day some new atrocity is alleged of the CIA, or another Black Panther headquarters is knocked over by the police and converted into an Algiers Motel. As these things happen more people conclude our justice is based on peeping toms, bullies and blackmailers.

●

Whatever the constitutionality of Attorney-General Mitchell standing tipitoe on a chair and sneaking looks over the transom into the national bedroom, these practices are discrediting the forms of justice. They are also giving impetus to a movement that is destroying them just as the law'norder people say.

In the old days when the heat was on, deviant behavior went underground. This isn't happening now. People don't feel guilty about what they're doing and they're not humbled before the majesty of the law.

The current response is to go above ground, to flout, to wave, to exhibit, to inundate the law by multiple public violations, by ridiculing it, by smashing its forms.

●

People loot stores while the television cameras photograph them; there are fag power riots in the streets of New York; it appears that thousands of young men successfully and nonchalantly defy the draft; sex, nudity, hairiness and rock music are deliberately used to weaken every institution which people despair of controlling lawfully when they believe the law is a fraud.

The trial is breaking down the forms of justice. The prosecution is appalled by the defence's taking its case to the television audience. The daily luncheon press conference put on by the defendants and their friends has demolished the legitimacy of the proceedings.

●

The dignity of the court would have suffered less had the Marx Brothers been let loose in it than it has from Abby Hoffman's interpreting the court's business to the people via the Cronkite show.

While hope in the jury remains, the court commands a vestigial respect, but how are these 12 people to penetrate their isolation, to see through the snide arguing of lawyers and understand that what the government is putting before them does not correspond with what happened in Chicago the summer before last?

For that, like the renewal of the anti-war fervor now, was too large to be encompassed by any conspiracy of eight men.

'Man Can't Separate Himself From His Fellow Creatures'

By JOHN GALE

Mrs. Joy Adamson, author of "Born Free" and wife of a senior game warden in Kenya, was in a London hospital when I first met her.

She had just had an operation on her right arm, severely injured in a car crash near Nairobi, Kenya.

Mrs. Adamson, who still speaks with an accent, was born in 1910 in Troppau in Austrian Silesia. Her parents divorced when she was 10. For 25 years, she has been married to George Adamson. They have lived in the vast, unspoiled area of Kenya's northern frontier.

Here in her own words are her comments on life, animals and human beings.

Thirty-two years in Kenya add up to an enormous insight into nature from every angle: life from sea-level up to 16,000 feet; the richest fauna and bird life. Yet wherever man goes it disappears: everything is used for man's benefit, and he goes on killing and destroying. He uses synthetic substitutes, but he is an organic creature that couldn't survive on substitutes; yet he is trying to do so and giving himself ulcers. We have over-developed our intellect at the cost of the senses. And we have such terrible conceit.

African in Touch With Life's Origin

How man of us can follow our inner voice in a sound way? Or use our scent and eyesight like an African? We can't. The African in the bush who has never moved from his village is simple; but he is in touch with the original meaning of life.

After living so long close to nature I can feel when I'm watched in the bush; I can sense animals round me without being able to see them; but the African can feel it better than I yet after long in the bush one has a perception; there are hints of something that is numbed and overlaid by our "civilization." Telepathy is one thing: I can sometimes feel when something goes wrong. Lion and cheetah can give each other orders over hundreds of miles. We know telepathy exists in animals.

Animals Practice Birth Control

Then there is birth control in animals. Why can't we manage it naturally? I learned from lion and cheetah. They can conceive every five or six weeks. For a lion, gestation is 3½ months and for a cheetah three. A lioness takes two years and a cheetah 18 months to bring up their young to be independent of them. During this time the female has no interest in the male; it is almost voluntary birth control. This reduces the proportion of predators so that they will not overkill.

Man cannot separate himself from the rest of his fellow creatures. Ecology means the co-operation of every living thing: the elephant is of the same importance as an ant, a vegetable, minerals or a bird.

Mrs. Adamsoh and friends

We invent our own destruction. How can we grow in our knowledge unless we learn the powers that motivate animal behavior so much more successfully than ours? Ants and termites are the only animals other than man capable of making systematic war. Man says no animals except man have religion or the capacity for abstract thinking. Is that true?

Elephants have an abstract conception of death and make monuments to their dead: elephants have carried the shoulder blade of a dead elephant back to the spot where it was shot; two young elephants carried the tusks of an old elephant and placed them near together; elephants put brushwood over a young calf that died, and they put cairns of brushwood over people that they kill. I knew of an elephant that came back every day and stood for an hour where it had killed a man. A leader of a herd once gave the coup de grace to a sick elephant cow: mercy-killing. They know what death means.

These things are a warning to us: we mustn't think we are the last word. Animals are far more responsive and sensitive than humans in many ways. And they behave as if they do have a kind of religion. We may make the same mistake as the dinosaur by out-living our environment. We have been on earth about two million years. But there are creatures still alive that have been on earth 200 million years. There is some balance that makes their survival possible. We must return: we must use our superior brain and present evolution to learn back very humbly from nature: learn how these animals can survive so long without destroying others.

Must Be Alone To Understand

You have to be part of nature to understand it; and you can only do that when you are completely in tune with it. I find I can only do it when I'm alone, without synthetic and mechanical aids. Then I can feel things that you cannot explain; things beyond our comprehension . . . I'm not a hermit, but there is no other way I can do it if I am to go into the depths of an animal's solitary life and be in tune with what it means. But it means a terribly lonely life.

Animals are more selective than humans in choosing their mating partners. Elephants go to very careful lengths to get the right vitamins; they know . . . an antelope's senses are so alert that it is aware of danger every moment. By our attempts to control nature we become more and more alone.

Cheetah Vanishing Because of Man

Every cheetah taken away into captivity is a loss for breeding. There are no wild cheetah left in India because the rajahs used them for hunting; there are very few in Africa, where they kill the parents for their skins and sell the babies to zoos. A cheetah now is one of the rarest animals. Animals likely to be exterminated are rhino, cheetah and lion. And it is all because of man, who is going faster and faster and becoming more and more artificial. Big cities are an expression of his madness. Once in New York I saw tombstones in a cemetery, and they echoed the silhouettes of Manhattan . . .

Dismaying Ho-Hum for A Once Vital Interest

By ART STOTT

Maybe it was the brilliance of the sun and the tang of October air that called us outdoors for clean-up work in the garden. Whatever the cause, we passed up the opening games of the World Series without a qualm. And that, it seems to me, calls for thought. Is it too easy now to sit before a television set and enjoy a box seat view of the autumnal classic? Has the take-over of the medium translated the event to just another entertainment program? Has something happened to baseball, leaving a lukewarm fan unaware of current personalities in the game? Or are we getting old?

Stott

Where has the overpowering magnetic force gone that once held us crowded around a scratchy radio hanging on every word issuing from the mouths of the pioneer sportscasters, Graham McNamee and Ted Husing? Why does it seem unimportant now to be ignorant of comparative statistics on the modern stars and such figures as Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Red Ruffing, Lefty Grove, or even the heroes of a recent past, Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, or, later still, Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale and Bob Gibson?

Some of my friends who keep the faith suggest it's because the Mets are a faceless team — who know who's playing what position? — that interest has waned for a number of people. Maybe, also, in a world which can produce so many insanities there is less room in the emotional field for the frenzied mania of World Series fever. Or just possibly, if the medium has become the message, the message has shrunk to Lilliputian scale.

Another disturbing consideration occurs: have we lost, or are we losing, the capacity for wonder and enthusiasm? To eyes that have seen man's first step on the moon, is the final step of a runner coming in from third and touching the plate important? It used to be, in the emotionally charged atmosphere which surrounded the World Series. But then our emotions hadn't been dulled to the same extent by the ecstasies of commercials indicating that one detergent made clothes whiter or brighter than another. We hadn't realized that the deepest emotions were stirred only by a particular deodorant or shampoo.

It is perhaps of little significance that we can restrain ourselves so completely now on the issue of which the winner of one United States league beats the winners of another United States league in what is called the World Series. Probably it's only a sign of the maturing process that the former youngsters who used to race home on a school day to catch an inning or two on the radio at lunchtime can walk quietly out of the house to cut out old garden growth and never have a twinge at their failure to twist the TV knob. The world would still spin without the Series. People could be happy without seeing a baseball game.

At the same time, the former enthusiast who has now lost interest might profitably ask himself what caused him to become jaded. Is it just baseball or has the general palate become dulled?

We read now about whole sections of our society that have become disenchanted, dissatisfied with life, who have turned off, dropped out, escaped to some never-never-land—and this at a time when we're constantly told we've never had it so good.

In spite of the empty seats in the stadium for the opening games and disregard by some television viewers of the box-seats they are offered and don't appreciate, a great number of people are still deeply interested in what the Mets do to the Orioles and vice-versa. And some who didn't watch those games gave up time and may have suffered eyestrain watching Canadian football or hockey. But even here, as the medium takes over and sport becomes a professional display to entertain the easy chair multitude, some of zest goes out of watching. The spectator is removed from a vicarious sense of participation.

Yet surely there's a simple remedy for the inclination toward boredom. And the remedy seems open to anyone who wants it—a return to a few simplicities. Tired of the miracles of television, and commercial wrappings in which it comes? Wander along the beach and watch the flight pattern of a flock of ducks swishing into a landing. Put your hands in the soil and find how next spring's bulbs are beginning to form their growth shoots. Fix your eyes on the dancing sea and trace the designs of breezes that puff its surface into laugh wrinkles. Walk a country path and smell the autumn scent of trees and listen to the sibilant whisper of leaves on the ground.

Sure we never had it so good, but all that's good doesn't come out of cans or containers technologically contrived. Take it the way nature offers it and you may find you're regaining taste for what used to please you—even the World Series that hasn't captured your interest yet.

Island's log book started with logs

That was more than forty years ago. Billions of board feet of timber have moved to the sawmill and the pulp plant behind Island's tugs since then.

But the story in the log books has changed considerably; industrial salt hauled from Mexico, aircraft carrier tows to Japan, mountains of limestone down the Oregon coast, rail cars by the thousands barged south and north to the end of steel, ships in distress towed to safety.

Little tows and tremendous tows that have made Island's log book something of an adventure story.

It could be to your advantage to have your company's name entered in Island's log book. Hundreds of others are there already.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Transair-Midwest

Officials of Transair Ltd. and Midwest Airlines have been discussing the prospect of merging and are expected to conclude agreement this week.

Transair reported a $145,000 net loss in the first half of last year.

Great Northern Capital Corp. Ltd. and Little Long Lac Gold Mines Ltd. own $1.675 million worth of Transair treasury shares (335,000 out of 1,115,645 outstanding), and Great Northern undertook $10.5 million financing of two Boeing 737 jets recently.

Sauder-General

Sauder Industries Ltd., of Vancouver has bought General Hardwood Co. of Tacoma, hardwood distributor and importer of Phillipine mahogany.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed. Sauder and its subsidiary, J. Fyfe Smith Co., operate hardwood distribution warehouses in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon, Winnipeg and Brandon.

Cominco Ltd.

A commitment to spend up to $525,000 in development work by the end of 1974, plus $100,000 in property payments has been undertaken by Cominco Ltd. for Highland Valley claims.

The property is held by Spectroair Explorations Ltd. and Highland Queen Mines Ltd.

On or before the end of this year, Cominco may take the option to form a new company to acquire three blocks of claims on a 70-30 basis. Work is underway.

VSE Afield

Vancouver Stock Exchange board of governors will hold a meeting at Prince George for the first time Friday as the third in a series of meetings away from home.

First of the series was in Victoria two years ago, followed last year by one in Kelowna

Governors will meet in Prince George city hall, hold a reception for about 200 businessmen and visit industry, including a brewery and sawmill.

Newsprint Price

Newsprint prices from Canadian producers will be up another $5 a ton next year.

All major Canadian producers announced a $5 increase within the last three weeks, bringing prices to $143 a ton in central Canada and $147 in B.C.

The price to U.S. customers will be $152 a ton. This market accounts for about 75 per cent of all Canadian newsprint sales.

The paper companies say despite earnings that for some time are more than 50 per cent up from the first half of 1968, they are not keeping pace with increased costs.

Goldfield Corp.

The Goldfield Corp. plans to concentrate land development activities in a wholly owned subsidiary known as Real Estate Resources Corp., and has named as its president Robert H. Young, who supervised about $170 million of real estate development in the U.S. southwest in the past 12 years.

Subject to stockholder approval, Goldfield is purchasing about 39 square miles of land in Florida located in the Melbourne-Grant areaz, about 25 miles south of Cape Kennedy and 18 miles north of Vero Beach. It also owns a resort and hotel sit on Paradise Island in the Bahamas.

It is proposed that Real Estate Resources Corp. shares may be offered to the public.

Canadian Arena

Shareholders of Canadian Arena Co., owners of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, Tuesday approved the company's proposed 50-for-one split of authorized and outstanding common shares and the cancellation of the company's preferred shares.

The split will increase the number of authorized shares to 1,125,000, of which 1,025,000 will be outstanding.

The company will seek listing on the Montreal Stock Exchange. The stock now trades on Canadian Stock Exchange at about $775 a share.

Atlantic Brewing

A sales increase of almost $4 million resulting in a consolidated net profit of $306,000 for Columbia Cellulose Ltd. was reported Tuesday by George W. Scrimshaw, president and chief executive officer, for the third quarter of 1969.

During the same quarter last year the company reported a loss of $1.97 million. Colcel's third-quarter net sales this year amounted to $24 million compared with $20.39 million in 1968.

Columbia Cel

British Columbia brewer Ben Ginter said Tuesday he is still "very interested" in buying Atlantic Brewing Co. Ltd. of Stephanville, Nfld., although he will not do so "at this time."

Ginter said his decision is due to "financial difficulties" that Altantic Brewing would have to resolve before he could again consider purchase. He did not elaborate.

Next B.C. Oil Sale Set for November

The mines and petroleum resources department has invited tenders on 58 petroleum and natural gas permits and four drilling reservations in northeastern British Columbia.

Tenders will be received until 11 a.m. Nov. 19, and awards will be announced the next day at the same time.

Fee for each parcel of oil land is $25 plus $1 per acre. Drilling reservations cost a $250 fee plus 20 cents per acre on a 12-month rental term, but most of the return is from competitive bonus bids.

Fishermen Win Protest

CAMPBELL RIVER — Starting Sunday, areas 12 and 13, including Johnstone and Queen Charlotte straits, will be open to commercial fishermen for two days.

The areas have been closed for three weeks.

District protection officer Joe Fielden said Tuesday that the areas would also be open for two days the following week, starting Oct. 26.

The three-week closure moved Campbell River fishermen to call a protest meeting last week. At the meeting it was stated that representatives had called for the removal of Fielden from the district.

Norman Lysne, secretary of Local 17 of the Fishermen's Union, said he was unable to support such a demand. He said Fielden was only the scapegoat "in this drama."

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Expansion Financing Vital

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.

(This is a service provided by the Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario.)

Business expansion may appear to be most profitable in the long run but it requires capital expansion at the beginning.

Almost every successful businessman understands that a new operation requires capital investment to provide for the cost of plant, inventory, accounts receivable and all of the other assets necessary for any business venture.

But, for some peculiar reason, they often overlook the obvious that an expansion of an existing operation also requires capital investment to provide for exactly the same costs which will increase because of the expansion.

If a business is making gross sales of $100,000 a year and has accounts receivable of about $10,000 outstanding then it is most probable that if gross sales double to $200,000 a year then the accounts receivable will also double to $20,000.

But that is not all. The increased sales will likely require a larger investment in merchandise inventory and probably additional initial costs for promotion and advertising.

These additional asset costs may be partly provided by corresponding increased sales. Thus, in effect, the suppliers to the business help to finance the expansion but there is normally some time lag between the date goods or services are purchased and the date they are sold and the business requires capital to finance during that time.

If an existing operation has uninvested funds or unused borrowing ability then the additional capital can be quickly made available when it is required. But idle funds, or even idle borrowing capacity, are relatively rare in the present economic climate after the vigorous expansion of the past several years.

Consequently, under-financed expansion is often the quick route to failure or to a "take-over" move by a better financed competitor. Strong corporations are constantly on the look-out for young aggressive businesses which can be picked up cheaply when they run into financial trouble.

For a substantial expansion programme to have any chance of success it must be a real programme fully worked out in detail, and not just an increased sales promotion.

The full programme must include a projected cash flow statement to show at regular intervals, preferably monthly, exactly how much cash will be required, where it will go to and, most importantly, where it will come from.

If the "come from" source is to be some form of borrowed money it is essential to obtain a commitment in writing from the expected money lender. It is not merely risky but grossly negligent for a businessman to carry out an expansion and then be surprised that his banker is reluctant to lend the necessary financing.

Every type of business has a different range of acceptable debt ratios so it is not practical to define what may be a safe borrowing limit for business in general. However, it is reasonable to say that any businessman who shows a ratio of more than four dollars of all forms of debt to one dollar of equity capital should be most cautious of his position and compare it with the average in his trade.

Vancouver Importer At Canton Showing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gerry Smith, a city businessman of 54 with a penchant for travel, left here Sunday to shop in China.

Even if he doesn't buy anything, the trip will cost him from $1,800 to $2,000 because for the next three weeks he'll be at the Chinese Export Commodities Fair in Canton, Mainland China.

"This fair has been going on for a number of years but there are very few Canadians who seem to be interested in it," said Smith in an interview.

"The people that are there are Australians, South Africans, West Germans, Italians and Japanese. There may be others but these seem to form the nucleus.

"I was told that if there are three other Canadians besides myself that will be about par."

While in China Smith will represent other Canadian firms as well as his own, family-operated small import business which sells dental supplies to dentists and dental technicians in B.C. and Alberta.

He'll act as an agent for companies interested in a variety of products, from heavy machinery to a jewelry firm interested in a source of raw jade.

The Chinese fair, held twice a year, has particular attractions to some businessmen. On display are a broad cross section of Chinese goods and manufactured articles. On hand are top officials of various Chinese trade groups from Peking.

Much of China's business is done through the fair at Canton, a city with a long tradition in export-import business.

"As a businessman you can't go to China and travel to all the manufacturers," said Smith. "They display their goods, you engage an interpreter and at night he makes the arrangements to meet the appropriate representatives."

He had to apply for an invitation to attend the fair.

"It took a long time — I'd say its taken me over a year."

"No red tape, just that they didn't reply the first couple of times and I kept writing. Finally I got it."

What attracted Smith, a Canadian citizen, to the Canton fair?

"I've read a lot of reports on the previous fairs, reports coming out of West Germany and Italy, indicating each fair is larger than the previous one."

Arrangements for living in Canton are made by the Chinese.

"I would like to go farther but I doubt I'll have the opportunity."

He plans to stay for at least three weeks of the fair, which lasts to Nov. 15.

And while the fair, organized into its present form in 1957, is primarily aimed at selling Chinese products to foreign businessmen, "if there's some way of selling Canadian products there I'll search this out . . ."

Federal Sales Tax Paid By B.C. Ferry Suppliers

Federal sales tax on supplies bought by B.C. Ferries is being paid "with great reluctance" by the suppliers themselves because the highways department considers itself exempt from assessment, according to revenue department officials.

To some, the 12 per cent rate means an added burden of thousands of dollars, yet there is no immediate relief in sight.

The problem arises because the ferry system, operating under department of highways jurisdiction, is designated by the department of national revenue as a commercial enterprise.

As a crown agency, the ferry system is not liable to taxation, according to interpretation of the highways department, leaving it necessary for tax levies by the federal government to be paid by the suppliers themselves.

Regional director of excise tax John Rollingson, of Vancouver, said his department "can do no other" than to charge the suppliers, and meanwhile "many are paying with great reluctance."

He hoped that representations could be made on behalf of the suppliers at the senior level of both governments, but he is aware of no such step having been taken.

Rollingson said the revenue department had made its decision based on legal advice, and that if the provincial authority did not agree, he would expect it to be a subject for discussion.

Wording of the Excise Tax Act specifically includes any agency operated by a provincial government, although there is exemption for goods sold to a government.

ATLANTIC OIL FINDS SEEN

LONDON (AP) — Oil or natural gas may be beneath the North Atlantic, scientists from Cambridge University and the National Institute of Oceanography has reported.

The scientists announced they had discovered a new sedimentary basin 10,000 feet beneath the bottom of the Atlantic, 300 miles northwest of Ireland.

The basin was similar to those in the Irish Sea and the North Sea where natural gas has been found, a statement from Britain's Natural Environment Research Council said.

The exploration team set out aboard the research ship Discovery in August to investigate the undersea Rockall Plateau, believed to be a fragment of a continent that sank when North American and Greenland split off from Europe about 100,000,000 years ago.

The scientists bounced sound signals off the ocean bed into a half-mile-long hydrophone towed astern. The soundings revealed the potential presence of oil or gas in the semimentary strata, the environment council said.

Battle for Tuna Pressing Leaders

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A furious war in being fought on the high seas, over fish.

The prize: A growing, multi-million-dollar trade in tuna.

The Japanese still lead, but Taiwan and Korea as well as European and South American nations are expanding their tuna fleets, and markets are becoming worldwide. As much as 1 million tons is being taken annually.

Less than a decade ago, the United States was virtually out of the race. Today, it's an uneasy second.

The U.S. has developed "super-seiners" with nets as big as city blocks. The largest, the 189-foot Day Island a converted Navy mine planter, can scoop up 200 tons of tuna and carry 1,100 tons.

In an effort to learn the U.S. fishermen's technique, the Soviets and Japanese reportedly have studied thousands of feet of motion picture film. August Felando, manager of the American Tuna-boat Association, said the Japanese put five tuna seiners into service this summer.

"They have been somewhat shocked and dismayed with poor results," he said today.

Bill WALKER

There was a fear in some quarters when the World Series began that the Baltimore Orioles would quickly put the New York Mets in their proper place, and things would become pretty commonplace until it was all over four games hence.

But such has not been the case, even though the Orioles did win the first game, and won it, irreverently, by defeating the Mets' best pitcher, Tom Seaver.

Actually, the Orioles appeared in complete command and having used the Mets' chief weapon, pitching, it appeared there might be some truth in the earlier supposition.

However, two other games have been played since then (and another will possibly have been played before you read this) and the Mets have given no signs of going quietly.

They are very much alive, have shown the Orioles that they have a couple of young men who can throw a baseball, and can throw it quite well, thank you.

As a matter of fact, up until this morning the Met pitchers have been almost downright rude to the Orioles and had allowed them only a total of 12 hits, half of which they got in the first game.

Jerry Koosman who gave up only two hits has done better than anyone else so far, and the Orioles never really seemed ready to solve his talents. But that didn't stop manager Gil Hodges from calling on a Canadian, Ron Taylor, to help get the job done in relief on Sunday.

The Mets, meanwhile, are not acting their average with the bat, either. They weren't supposed to hit, so anything extra they do in this regard is a bonus.

●

On Sunday it was a fellow like Al Weiss, who had replaced a good hitter like Ken Boswell. Weiss batted .175 last year and ballooned all the way to .215 this season. In the second series game, he then proceeded to steal the honor and the glory. He got two hits, and made one count big by knocking in the winning Met run. Don Clendennon who had come to the Mets from Montreal, had hit a home run earlier.

On Tuesday, Clendennon didn't even play.

Hodges, who seemingly can reach into his faceless lineup for a regular and make it work almost every time, did so again and put four fellows on the field who hadn't started in the first two games.

One was Ed Kranepool who, when he left high school, received $85,000 for signing a pro contract. He put the icing on the Met victory with an eighth-inning home run.

Before that, and for ever afterwards the hero of the piece will be Tommy Agee, the Mets' centrefielder. And I suppose this is only fit and proper because Agee, besides being a former American Leaguer, also has been the Mets' most consistent performer and home-run champion this season.

His two catches, in the fourth and seventh innings, the first time with two men on base, and the second time with the bases loaded were remarkable, to say the least, and life-saving for the Mets, to say it all.

White was showing on the ball in Agee's glove in both cases, and the Orioles were running on both occasions as two men were out.

●

If they count saves for outfielders, Agee should be credited with five. In addition, he put the Mets in the needed perspective for the home fans by leading off the first inning with a home run, his second of the series.

It might be said that this would have been all the Mets would need because they did eventually win by a shutout, but it was that tense at the finish that they aren't to be telling any bad jokes about the Orioles at this time.

For although Met starter Garry Gentry, a cocky-looking youngster of 23, with a crackling fast ball, and Nolan Ryan, another strong-armed youngster, with an even faster fast ball, did hold the Orioles runless, it was because of Agee, a two-run single by Gentry in the second, and the possible invocation of some divine providence, that final victory was attained.

The Orioles had two or more runners on in the fourth, fifth, seventh and ninth innings, and couldn't break through, then it took a Ryan super-pitch to end it all in the ninth.

With Paul Blair at the plate, and he had been the victim of Agee's sensationalism in the seventh, Ryan literally blew the ball past the Baltimore outfielder on the first two pitches.

●

Then with Blair hitched up and waiting for the next fire pitch, and three Orioles straining on the bases, Ryan dipped a curve ball over the centre of the plate and Blair is still looking.

This ended the palpitations for the Met fans, and they exploded as usual.

Whether the Mets will be able to repeat the chore the rest of the week remains to be seen, naturally.

But at least entering today's game they again had their No. one and No. two pitchers ready for the job at hand. But so did the Orioles.

Now it is a question of whether the muscle that the Orioles own, but have not yet been able to use sufficiently well, will come to the fore as freely predicted earlier, or whether the Mets don't really need the supernatural after all.

Certainly neither side is displaying any signs of knuckling down to the other.

The Orioles have given it a real run in the last two, by putting the pressure on the marvellous ones, twice, and in the ninth inning.

The Mets have given it right back to them each time and said:

So what?

Agee dives . . .

. . . and rolls once . . .

. . . but still holds ball

Mets Not Magical, Says Birds' Boss, They're Just Good!

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a suspicion to the contrary, Baltimore Orioles continue to deny that New York Mets and the man upstairs have formed some sort of strange alliance.

"You know what somebody told me?" coach Joe Pignatano asked with a laugh in the Mets dressing room after the club took a 5-0 victory over the Orioles Tuesday that gave them the lead in the World Series.

"God is a Met fan."

"We," added manager Gil Hodges, "certainly picked up some more non-believers with this one."

But they didn't pick up any of the Orioles.

"They're not supermen," said outfielder Frank Robinson.

"They're flesh and blood. The writers want to make it look like somebody's looking over them, but there's nothing to that."

They're Just Good

"They tell me," said Orioles manager Earl Weaver, "that man up there likes us all the same.

"Magic? They don't have any magic. They're just good.

"Heck, if Agee has an ingrown toe nail we got five runs."

Tommie Agee the Mets centre fielder, didn't have an ingrown toe nail Tuesday, but he did have a leadoff homer that gave the Mets an edge they never relinquished and two spine-tingling catches that preserved the victory.

The catches and shutout pitching by Gary Gentry and Nolan Ryan pulled the Mets into a 2-1 lead after three games of the best-of-seven Series and gave them a substantial edge the oddsmakers and experts never expected.

Not at Wall Yet

With two more games in New York, today and Thursday, and with Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman lined up to handle the pitching, they are in position to complete the miracle that has seen them move from ninth place last year to the top this season.

"Do we have our backs against the wall? No," said Robinson. "When they need only one more, then we have our backs against the wall. They have only the advantage of being one-up just the same as when we won the first game."

When it's all over, no matter who wins, there are two things that happened in the third game that will never be wiped out—Agee's catches, already ranked among the best made in the entire history of the Series.

The first was made in the fourth inning with two men on when Agee chased a drive by Ellie Hendricks to the wall in left centre, spearing it one-handed in the web of his glove before grazing up against the wall.

The second was made in the seventh inning with the bases loaded when Agee had to go the other way into right centre for a liner by Paul Blair, diving for it one-handed at the last second as the wind kept carrying the ball away from him. (See picture.)

First One Best

Although the second catch was more dramatic because of the acrobatics involved, both Agee and Hodges agreed the first was the better of the two.

Agee also ranked them over his homer.

"The homer meant only one run," he said simply. "The catches saved more than that."

The homer came off Jim Palmer, who gave up two more runs in the second inning when Gentry doubled after a walk to Jerry Grote and a single by Bud Harrelson.

The Mets pecked away for a sixth inning run on Ken Boswell's single and a double by Grote, then wrapped up the scoring with a seventh-inning homer by Ed Kranepool.

Gentry had the Orioles

Heartburn Pills Should Be Handy

By The Canadian Press

John McLellan, who replaced Punch Imlach as coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, had the jitters going into tonight's renewal of the National Hockey League rivalry between the Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

"Nervous?" the rookie coach said Tuesday. "Geez, you never imagine how nervous you're going to be. I had no idea why so many coaches are on heartburn tablets, until now."

McLellan recalled his first game this year with the Leafs at Maple Leaf Gardens, an exhibition match in which Chicago Black Hawks beat the Leafs 4-1.

"I could hear three or four voices, out of those 16,000 or whatever it was, yelling 'We want Punch, we want Punch'.

"I heard that and said to myself, 'Already? Geez, and there's 76 games left.'"

All NHL teams were in action tonight, with Oakland Seals facing the Bruins at Boston, Minnesota North Stars at New York against the Rangers, Detroit Red Wings at Chicago Black Hawks, Philadelphia Flyers meeting the Penguins in Pittsburgh and St. Louis Blues playing host to Los Angeles Kings.

McLellan will have defenceman Tim Horton and centre Norm Ullman back in his lineup. Ullman has recovered from a rib injury and Horton has been getting in condition after being lured out of a self-imposed retirement.

WILL DUFF PLAY?

The Canadiens, meanwhile, were having problems with left winger Dick Duff, who apparently was unsure if he wanted to continue playing.

The 33-year-old veteran of 14 seasons in the NHL met Tuesday with Canadiens general manager Sam Pollock.

"He's going to think it over for two or three days before coming to a final decision," Pollock said.

"Unfortunately, I'm not able to say what the problem is because it is of a personal nature.

"Dick has a great many things going through his mind right now."

Meanwhile, John Ferguson had a cast removed from his left hand Monday but will not be able to play until the weekend. The left-winger injured his thumb early in the exhibition schedule.

Detroit has recalled goalie Don McLeod from their Fort Worth, Tex. farm club in the Central League to back up Roy Edwards. The Red Wings' other regular goalie, Roger Crozier, is out with a recurring stomach ailment.

The Wings also announced they have claimed defenceman Mike McMahon on waivers from Chicago.

Ottawa Injuries May Help Bombers

WINNIPEG (CP) — For Ottawa Rough Riders, tonight's Canadian Football League game could mean a better grip on first place in the East. But for Winnipeg Blue Bombers it's one of the last—and toughest—battles for the third and final playoff berth in the Western Conference.

Ottawa coach Frank Clair held out some hope to Winnipeg fans at a news conference Tuesday night.

"We're in the worst shape that we've been in in years," he said. "The boys will be in there, but I don't know how long they'll last."

Defensive coach Jack Gotta, on the other hand, was more optimistic. He said Winnipeg's defensive strength lies mostly with its secondary, and the absence of Phil Minnick, a defensive standout for the Bombers, has got to hurt.

Minnick is out of action for the rest of the season with a back injury.

THREE GAMES REMAIN

Tonight's game is one of the three remaining to Bombers.

Winnipeg's other games this season are against B.C. Lions Oct. 26 and Calgary Stampeders Nov. 2. However, both Edmonton and B.C. also have three games left to play.

One victory for Edmonton would mean Winnipeg would have to win at least two more to make the playoffs.

Winnipeg coach Joe Zaleski said the tight last-minute race for the third berth has his team keyed up for victory.

The game, which begins at 6 p.m. PDT, will be televised on the CBC national network out of Winnipeg.

GRID DEATH INVESTIGATED

PLATTEVILLE, Wis. (AP) — Steve Schoenecker, a freshman on the Platteville State University football team, collapsed and died Tuesday afternoon during a practice drill.

The county coroner will conduct an investigation into the death.

Schoenecker, 18, is the second football player to die in Wisconsin in five days. Last Friday, David Wenzel, 16, of Florence High School, suffered a fatal heart seizure.

O'Keefes Rate a Look From Western Circuit

The Western Canada Soccer League has thrown an admiring glance at Victoria but officials of the O'Keefes, now campaigning in the Pacific Coast League, are showing only a lukewarm response.

Victoria officials received a letter two weeks ago from WCSL headquarters in Regina. It indicated a franchise in the summer circuit might be available if O'Keefes felt an entry could be supported.

O'Keefes president Ron Southern then was invited to attend a league meeting last week. Since it was impossible for any member of the Victoria executive to attend the meeting, Southern asked "for more particulars."

Southern said an answering letter was "very vague," O'Keefes, he added, "are still willing to listen" but he indicated chances of a Victoria entry are "remote" at least for a year, or two.

Former Victorian Bruce Twamley, who campaigned for Vancouver Spartans in the summer league, was named to the WCSL all-star team. He was one of eight Vancouver players selected.

Others named were fullbacks Bob Cram and Geoff Hastings, halfback Sam Lenarduzzi, forwards Harold Hansen, John Milner and Peter Simpson and coach Peter Dinsdale.

Regina was represented by John Schepers. Halfback Colin Atkinson of Edmonton Canadians, forward Danny Martai of Calgary Kickers and goalie Sandy Bastylovan Sky of Winnipeg Blues rounded out the all-star selections.

HABS SELL WINGER

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens have sold winger Chuck Hamilton to Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League and optioned winger Ernie Hicke to Salt Lake City of the Western League.

Art Johnson of Regina was elected as the league president for 1970, Mike Fischer of Regina will be vice-president.

O'Keefes, meanwhile, announced today the re-signing of former professional Jim Menzies, who played regularly with the Victoria squad two years ago.

Menzies, a former player with first division St. Johnstone and second division Cowdenbeath of the Scottish League prior to coming to Canada, will probably be in the lineup for an inter-locking game Saturday against Vancouver Lobbans in Royal Athletic Park.

The game is the second of a series set up by the PCSL against teams from the Mainland League as well as Richmond, Fraser Valley and Victoria district leagues.

Croatia of the PCSL downed MSL-champion Glenavon 4-0 in the first interlocking contest Monday in Vancouver.

Coffey Extends Lead In East Scoring Race

Tommy Joe Coffey scored all of Hamilton's points Sunday to increase his lead in the Eastern Football Conference scoring race to 19 points over Ottawa kicker Don Sutherin.

Coffey picked up a touchdown and a convert as the Tiger Cats dropped a 17-7 decision to Toronto Argonauts and now has 119 points on 10 touchdowns, 26 converts, nine field goals and five singles.

Ottawa halfback Vic Washington holds down third place with 78 points on 13 touchdowns, while Toronto's Dave Raimey and Dennis Duncan of Montreal, each with 10 TDs, share fourth place.

In the Western Conference, kickers are setting the point pace with Saskatchewan's Jack Abendschan out in front with 98 points, followed by Larry Robinson of Calgary (80) and British Columbia's Ted Gerela (79).

Ankle Injury Stamp Worry

CALGARY (CP) — Quarterback Jerry Keeling will probably not play for Calgary Stampeders in their next game because of an injured ankle, coach Jim Duncan said Tuesday.

Keeling injured the ankle Sunday when he piled into the line on a short-yardage play during Calgary's 16-15 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

METNIKS GETTING JADED . . .

. . . AFTER A COUPLE OF WINS

Mrs. Onassis' Moves Overshadowed by Agee

By SHIRLEY POVICH
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles put his fourth pitch of the day a bit up, and in an eyeball-to-high ball confrontation Tommie Agee knocked it out of the park. This sudden home run by New York Mets' lead-off hitter had two effects. It left the Orioles numbed, and it stood up as the winning run of the third World Series game, although New York garnished it with some others.

For the rest of the day, Agee was competing for attention in Shea Stadium with Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and winning that contest, too. Mrs. Onassis, with her passion for privacy, including freedom from cameramen, came to Shea as a simple seeker of solitude only to find 56,335 other folks there.

Mrs. Onassis, her husband and children Caroline and John had very good seats behind the Mets' dugout, suggesting they had written in early for their tickets. She made several moves that brought photographers running and induced a craning of necks in her direction, but it was a losing battle against Agee, who, in addition to his home run, was making continual high excitement for Met fans with his fielding glove.

The Mets were lucky to have Agee in centre field or this would not have been as glorious a day for them.

In the fourth inning, with two Orioles on base and two out and everybody running, Agee galloped a mile into left centre to haul in Elrod Hendrick's pregnant swat. That was only for warm-ups. In the seventh, Agee attained his apogee. This time it was with the bases full of Orioles, two out and everybody running on Paul Blair's long blast to right centre. Agee caught up with it with a last, desperate grab while dry-surfing over the sod on both knees.

Mrs. Onassis had nothing with which to match that move.

When Agee wasn't beating the Orioles to a frazzle, the Mets' pitcher, Gary Gentry, was — and not by his shutout pitching alone. On a day when Gentry was pitching three-hit ball and blanking the Orioles before needing help in the seventh, the rookie's superb pitching was getting second billing to his hitting heroics.

The Orioles were caught in their own neglect. They knew about Gentry as a pitcher but they had no good book on his hitting prowess, probably thinking that was unnecessary in the case of a batter who currently was 0-for-28, had a batting average of .081 for the year and had driven in only one run in his major-league career.

They pitched wrong to Gentry in the second inning, according to all the evidence. He hit Palmer's first pitch into right centre field, with the Baltimore outfielders pulled around toward left, and helped the Mets establish a beautiful running game, Jerry Grote galloping home from second and Bud Harrelson scoring all the way from first.

Mrs. Onassis, meanwhile, was seen in lively conversation with Mr. Onassis in their box, and one report that sifted up to the press box from downstairs indicated she thought the Orioles' starter was a little wild with his breaking stuff. But it was not until there was pressing need for a pinch hitter in the seventh that Baltimore manager Earl Weaver made a pitching change.

With Agee winning their hearts, minds and plaudits, the 56,335 Metniks were having a wonderful time. They taunted the Orioles with banners that said "Bye-By Birdies," but they also showed signs of a new maturity. At the last out, not a single Met fan leaped the fences to embrace their heroes. You win the National League playoff and then two World Series games in a row and you can get pretty jaded.

VIKING VIEWS

By Brian Butters

Over the past few years, rugby has developed into a sport of major importance at the University of Victoria. And Uvic has a rugby organization that deserves praise.

What was formerly a one-team, one-coach affair, has now become a multi-team, multi-player system with more than a few championships to its name.

UVic is now able to boast of four teams, two in the prestigious First Division of the Victoria Rugby Union. These two teams, Vikings and Norsemen, also compete in the Pacific Northwest College Rugby Conference, which involves teams from Oregon and Washington.

Vikings are the top squad at UVic, and last year enjoyed their best season ever. In addition to winning the regular-season championship of the Victoria Rugby Union, they captured the playoff crown, and went on to lose by only a small margin to the perennially strong Vancouver Kats in a battle for the B.C. championship.

If that wasn't enough, the Vikings also claimed top honors in the Pacific Northwest Conference, defeating longtime-rival University of British Columbia on the way to an undefeated season.

Recently returned from a tour of the British Isles, in which they won two of their six games, the Vikings presently occupy first place in Victoria's First Division and appear to be the team to beat.

★ ★ ★

The team has the same nucleus as last year, but with a few notable absences. Scrum-half Dave Slater and centre Gary Johnson remained in Europe following the Vikings' tour, and hooker Rick Donald has graduated from college ranks.

However, such standout performers as wing Dave Leonard, tail-up Al Foster, and centre Dave Hutchings are back for another year, as are forwards Neil Rawnsley and Dave Pue. Newcomers to the varsity squad, Wayne Loutet, at scrum-half, and Jim Dempsey, at hooker, have moved up from lower-division UVic teams.

The entry of the second-string Norsemen into the First Division marks the first such accomplishment in Victoria and is an example of the calibre of play of UVic teams. Norsemen were entitled to move up this year after clinching the Second Division championship in Victoria last year.

Competing in the Second Division this year will be the Saxons, UVic's third team. Although the season is young, this team has yet to lose a game in league play.

The fourth UVic team is the Jutes, composed mainly of freshman students. This team competes in the Junior Intercollegiate Rugby League, against UBC, Royal Roads, and B.C.I.T.

Head coach is Dave Docherty, who is responsible for fielding as many as four teams on a single day. General-manager Howard Gerwing looks after administrative details.

★ ★ ★

City soccer fans will have their eyes on UVic's Vikings when they play in Winnipeg for the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship this weekend. The UVic soccer team is favored to win the round-robin tournament, which ends Sunday.

★ ★ ★

UVic hoop teams continue preparation for W.C.I.A.A. basketball openers, as waistlines become slimmer and jump-shots more accurate. Vikings, under Bob Bell, and Vikettes, under Wally Yeamans, open their campaigns next month.

Cross-country runners are busy preparing for the W.C.I.A.A. championship race to be held at Royal Roads on Nov. 1. On Saturday, UVic track ace Larry Corbett finished fifth in a 60-man field in a B.C. Cross-Country meet at UVic.

Victoria's top finisher was Norm Patenaude of the Optimist Spartans, who finished fourth. Other local placings included Ed Day (14th), Jack Penfold (15th), Charlie Thorne (27th) and Jeff Hawker (28th).

UVic placed fourth in the meet and holds down third place in the league standings.

JOINING executive force of Boston Bruins is Fern Flaman, former captain and defenceman with National Hockey League clubs for 12 seasons. Flaman will work on player development staff.

Woman Jockey Flees Abductor

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (UPI) — Mary Bacon, 21, the leading U.S. girl jockey, and her agent were kidnapped briefly Tuesday by a racetrack hanger-on who police said had a "crush" on her.

The pretty, 95-pound blonde managed to break free and outrace her abductor several hundred yards to the northeast extension of the Pennsylvania Turnpike where she got a motorist to take her to police.

Roy Court, her agent, was locked in the trunk of his auto but used a penknife to open the lid and drive off for help.

Policeman Thomas Czurawski said "Mary was in top physical condition. When she started to run, that guy just couldn't have caught her."

POLICE SEARCHED

State police searched for Paul Turner, 45, of Postum, Ill., and Lexington, Ky. They said he came here several weeks ago from River Downs racetrack in Cincinnati, where he was last employed.

A spokesman for Pocono Downs, where Mrs. Bacon is the third leading rider, said Turner "probably had known of Mary from other tracks. He's had his eye on her for some time."

Mrs. Bacon, whose husband, John, is a jockey in Montreal and scheduled to ride here Wednesday night, told police she and Court were abducted when they left her motel for Pocono Downs.

The girl, a mother of a seven-month-old daughter who lives with her grandmother in New York City, said Court picked her up at the motel daily.

She said Turner asked for a ride to the track and Court agreed.

She said a few minutes later, Turner pulled a knife, jerked her from the front to the back seat with him and ordered Court to drive to an area two miles from the track.

LOCKED IN TRUNK

On a dirt road, he ordered Court to stop and locked him in the trunk authorities said. Court told police that before Turner pushed Miss Bacon into the woods he heard him say "I'm going to do you in just like I did that girl in Chicago."

Police said Court and the girl heard Turner mention a name but were unable to remember it. Authorities expressed belief he was merely strengthening his threat.

The girl told police she saw her chance to escape when they came to a steep embankment and her abductor slipped and fell.

Jimmy Bragan, 40, was hired as first base coach, succeeding Bob Oldis. Oldis has been reassigned at his own request to a scouting position with the Expos.

Brothers Battle For Racing Prize

Times News Service

Donnie Allison survived a high-speed duel with his older brother Bobby and won a thrilling national 500-mile stock-car race Sunday before about 57,000 spectators at Charlotte, N.C.

Donnie, in a team Ford, and Bobby, in a team Dodge, slugged it out in one of the best NASCAR grand national races of the season.

Donnie, 29, and his brother, 31, swapped the lead several times during the final 200 miles. At times, they toured the one and one-half mile Charlotte Motor Speedway bumper to bumper.

FIRST VICTORY

It was Donnie who finally gained the advangage, and it was his crew's quick work during a final pit stop that gave him the winning margin of 16 seconds. The average speed was 131.262 miles per hour.

Donnie picked up $23,090 from the $116,000 purse. It was his first victory of the season. Bobby won $10,395.

Buddy Baker finished third and Charlie Glotzbach fourth, both in the new-winged Dodge Charger Daytona.

At Monterey, Calif., Bruce McLaren and Dennis Hulme, who finished one-two in the Monterey Grand Prix section of the Canadian-American challenge Cup Sunday, retained their first and second-place margins in the Can-Am standings after nine races.

The standings, released here today, show McLaren in first place with 145 points and Hulme in second with 140. The other top eight in the standings are far behind.

Chuch Parsons of the United States is in third place with 62 points and Joe Siffert of Switzerland in fourth with 46.

Chris Maon of Italy was in fifth place after the race with 39 points, four points ahead of George Eaton of Toronto with 35.

Gunfighter Flashes As Drag Season Ends

Portland driver Gary Coe abandoned his usual role as a featured performer and ran his C class-altered machine in open competition during the season-ending drag-racing program at Van Isle Dragways.

Coe was rewarded with a competition-eliminator victory Sunday as he wheeled his record-setting 'Gunfighter—a 1957 Ford with a modified, fuel-injected, 289-cubic-inch power-plant—through the quarter-mile distance in 11.91 seconds for a speed of 113.06 m.p.h.

More than 2,000 fans watched Clayton Wright again prove his supremacy in the stock ranks by running his 1969 Firebird to a best 12.24 ET-113.35 m.p.h. on the Mill Bay asphalt.

Street eliminator honors went to Dave Stobbe of Abbotsford (12.43-107.65) and Richmond's George Davis (11.26-115.83) was the fastest super-stock pilot.

CAMBRIDGE WINS

LONDON (CP) — Cambridge University beat St. Mary's Hospital 21-8 in a Rugby Union match Tuesday.

stopped on three singles until he loaded the bases with three walks and Ryan came on to throw the pitch that Blair lashed to right centre and led to Agee's acrobatics.

Strikes Blair Out

Then, in the ninth, a pinch single by Dave May around a pair of walks loaded the bases with two out and put Ryan in jeopardy. But he ended it by getting Blair on three straight strikes.

That sends the teams back to Saturday's opening game pitchers for today's fourth game. Seaver starts against Mike Cuellar, who won the first game 4-1.

Koosman, the second-game winner, will follow for the Mets on Thursday.

"I couldn't plan for anything better," Hodges said.

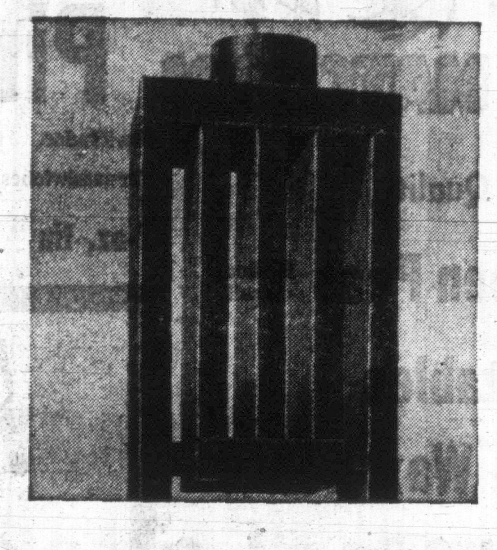

With left-hander Cuellar pitching for the Orioles, Hodges today went back to his right-hand hitting lineup. Ron Swoboda, Al Weis, Ed Charles and Donn Clendenon replaced Art Shamsky, Boswell, Wayne Garrett and Kranepool at four positions.

This gadget can save up to 18 cents from every dollar spent on heating oil.

You'll find it in the new Shell Furnace.

The gadget is a complicated boxful of steel tubes. It traps left-over heat—heat most furnaces waste up the chimney. The gadget—a special heat-exchanger—is unique to the Shell Oil Furnace.

Here's how it saves heating dollars. The heat-exchanger sits between the combustion chamber and the chimney outlet (see cutaway diagram). Hot waste gases from the combustion chamber flow through the tubes, making the tubes hot. Cool Room Air is drawn over the hot tubes and becomes heated.

How much will you save?

Because this heat-exchanger saves 'left-over heat', you save money. How much you save depends on two things: the efficiency of your old furnace, and the efficiency of the rest of your heating system. A typical 15 yr. old furnace runs at 65-70% efficiency. A new Shell Furnace can reach an efficiency of 80% in an ideal heating system.

For each dollar spent on oil for the old furnace, a new Shell Furnace can save up to 18 cents.

You may make even greater savings. Just phone us at the number below. We'll show you —absolutely free of charge—how much lower your fuel bills can be. This service puts you under no obligation at all. Call us.

Tuck it in a corner

The new Shell Furnace is only 3¼ ft. high, 2 ft. wide and 4⅔ ft. deep. Tuck it in a corner and save basement space. Controls are hidden by an attractive walnut-grain panel.

The furnace is rust-proof, with a wipe-clean enamel finish. Cabinet is built of heavy-duty steel—welded to eliminate rattles. Even the motor is cushioned to reduce noise.

Summer cooling fan

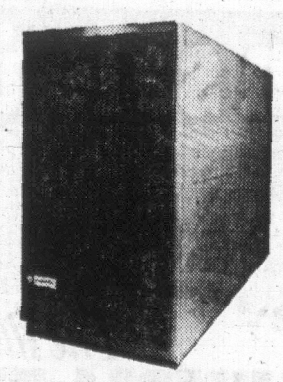

A special Summer Fan sends a cool breeze through your home. Permanent filters remove airborne dust.

During Winter, automatic controls hold room temperatures steady within two or three degrees. There's no chilly wait before the furnace cuts in.

10 years to pay, installed in a day

There's no down-payment, and installments can be as low as the figure quoted below. You are billed on your heating-oil statement, so there's just one cheque to write.

Installation usually takes less than a day. We also check ducts, pipelines, thermostats and tank to make sure the whole system works properly.

Space-saving design. Hidden controls. 10 year warranty.

North Areas Can Be Tamed

EDMONTON (CP) — Human activity could be more prudently regulated and better design and planning may be possible through improved understanding of the climate and its biological effects in northern Arctic areas, the Tundra Conference was told today.

Dr. G. A. McKay of the transport department's meteorological branch in Toronto said in a paper presented at the conference that better understanding will simplify many of the problems of production and conservation in the north.

Dr. McKay said the Arctic is a paradox. Its desolation and interminable, harsh winters have resisted inroads by modern man, while the barrens provide habitat for animals and plant life of "remarkable variety."

Through a more complete understanding of the region, "the Arctic paradox may then tend to disappear," he said.

"The harsh climate poses many technical problems in construction, resource development, communications, transportation and tourism and, indeed, almost every activity within the Arctic," Dr. McKay said.

"Techniques and standards developed for temperate latitudes are frequently unsuitable for Arctic extremes."

Human activity in the Arctic is limited by the extreme climate which also challenges survival, he said.

"Nevertheless, winter is the favored season for travel since the sea ice and the land are then firm underfoot."

Dr. McKay said storms in all seasons are most severe near the sea coasts where recurrent gales complicate the selection of suitable harbors and townsites and make travel in ice fields extremely dangerous.

He said agriculture is possible in certain areas where suitable soils exist and the low temperatures are offset by the long hours of daylight.

"However, the growing period and energy available for growth are severely limiting and consequently, except for protected plots, agriculture is costly and uncertain."

Hard Knocks Help Cause

Ald. Cecil Parrot is a firm believer in defensive driving courses.

He was in complete agreement with a recommendation from city manager Dennis Young Tuesday morning that council should spend $675 to give the 175 civic employees driving vehicles a course in driver training.

Ald. Parrot's view might have been influenced, however, by the minor accident he was involved in while driving to the committee meeting.

He rejected a suggestion by Ald. Ian Stewart, however, that "you'd better take the course, too."

Mankind's Greatest Need?

We feel that the greatest need is to know God — to understand the power of Love with such clarity that every prayer becomes a channel of healing in the lives of men. Don't Pollute the Sewage By Flushing Away Pesticides

Some Victoria area residents are polluting their sewage and garbage.

Recent publicity over the dangers of certain pesticides has caused public concern to the point where householders are flushing chemicals down the toilet or putting them into garbage, the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health said in a public warning issued Tuesday.

"To prevent a serious situation which may arise from such practices, the B.C. department of agriculture has undertaken to accept and dispose of any unwanted pesticides," the board said.

•

The pesticides are toxic and flushing them down the toilet will simply spread them into the ocean, streams or ditch—wherever the sewer ends.

Putting them in the garbage is not as dangerous, because garbage is buried here. But some parts of the province don't bury garbage.

Unwanted pesticides could be left for disposal at the office of the district horticulturist, Douglas Building, or at any of the offices of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

•

The material must be packaged so contents won't escape. Leaking packages or containers will not be accepted.

Individuals who want to dispose of pesticides themselves should bury them in a hole two feet deep, well away from water sources, with a two-inch layer of lime below and above, with containers broken or pierced so that the lime and pesticide mix.

Among pesticide products which have caused recent concern are DDT, Aldrin, Dieldrin, Endrin and Heptachlor.

ABOUT $80,000 WORTH of electronic equipment sits at the back of the B.C. legislative chamber for the Colombo Plan Conference now in session. Sgt. R. C. Poulton of the department of national defence, one of five men who set up and maintain it, adjusts some of the equipment which records proceedings and provides French and English translations. Most delegates speak English, which is the official language of Colombo business, but delegates from Vietnam and Cambodia are French-speaking.

Health Board Wants Seven Hospitals Shut

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Seven older private hospitals in Greater Victoria should be closed, the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health was told Tuesday.

But because of the shortage of hospital beds in the area it will be necessary to keep them in operation for the next two or three years.

Senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said this morning he doesn't want to identify the older private hospitals until a joint survey by the health board staff and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service is complete.

But he promised they will be named in the report which should be presented to the next health board meeting in November.

Asked if they will be closed when sufficient public hospital beds are available, he said "absolutely, when sufficient continuing care beds are available."

He said there are roughly 200 patients in the seven hospitals.

DEPEND ON WELFARE

Whitbread said newer private hospitals can be more easily cleaned and maintained and they also have private patients who pay more than welfare patients, thus increasing hospital income.

The older smaller ones depend heavily on welfare patients for whom the fixed rate is $245 a month per person, paid by the welfare department.

He said such hospttals should have been closed down because of lack of facilities, the age of the buildings and the fact that it isn't worth the expenditure required for repainting and replacing linoleum.

"We have to go into the whole business and indicate to those responsible it is necessary to increase rates or we have to do something drastic and recommend their closure or that the welfare rate go up," he said.

RISING COSTS

A staff summary attached to the agenda of Tuesday's health board meeting said the Chinese Hospital, on Herald Street, has experienced "some difficulties" and this applied to other private hospitals in their attempts to meet rising wages and operating costs.

"There are seven private hospitals in the Greater Victoria area which are in a condition which would normally warrant that they discontinue operating as private hospitals," said the summary.

"Due to the shortage of beds, it will be necessary to keep these private hospitals operating for the next two or three years.

"A survey will be carried out by the Metropolitan Board of Health staff and BCHIS so that a report may be submitted indicating that other private hospitals may be in the same circumstances as the Chinese Hospital and, unless monies are available to keep up the facilities and pay satisfactory wages to the staff, some of these private hospitals may have to close down, thus causing a problem in the welfare departments to place these patients in other nursing homes or private hospital beds.

"It may be necessary to request the provincial welfare department to increase the monthly payment for welfare patients above the present $245 per month."

Put in Sewers Or Pay Heavily Board Warns

Property owners in the unorganized area west of Victoria could be hit for a whopping bill unless they approve piped sewers.

This message was given to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health Tuesday.

If sewers aren't approved, the cost could be 10 times as great, up to $1,200 a year per property.

A summary attached to the health board meeting agenda said the only answer to "many sewage nuisances" such as leakage into ditches and creeks is the construction of a sewerage system. Any action to correct existing nuisances would cost more than a sewerage system.

The summary also stated that if the referendum does not go through "it will be necessary for us to take court action under the sewage disposal regulations, requiring individual householders or operators of motels and trailer courts to install a satisfactory sewage disposal system, containing the effluent on the property.

"As indicated above, the cost would be far greater than the installation of a sewerage system. If action is taken, a court case may result in a $100 fine and $10 per day thereafter for as long as the condition exists."

Figures given to the meeting and from an engineering company put the cost of sewering View Royal at approximately $120 per property per year. A referendum is expected in December.

Sewage Trucks Expensive

Extension of this area from Parson's Bridge to Colwood Plaza and out to St. Mary's Priory would raise the cost in Colwood to about $160.

But a further extension to the residential area around Jacklin Road in Langford would bring in more properties and reduce the sum back to $120.

The alternative costs to sewers were mentioned by Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer. Remedying existing sources of pollution could require holding tanks plus trucking away of sewage effluent.

Tanks would cost several hundred dollars and trucking costs could be as high as $100 a month, or $1,200 a year.

Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, chairman of Saanich Peninsula School Board, said it is costing the board $7,000 for a 10-month contract to haul sewage effluent from two schools alone.

The board was told that View Royal fire district is proposing a referendum on sewerage this December. The system would use the rebuilt Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt. The possibility existed of a referendum also happening in Colwood and Langford.

Health Inspector Laurel Benham said "unfortunately Langford and Colwood have very short notice to attempt the same thing in their area, for their fire trustees to agree to be the sewerage agency. I hope they are successful."

He said if there is not a successful referendum in Langford and Colwood, "it would appear that it will be about 1985 before the (new) outfall south of Esquimalt Lagoon will be provided.

"In that case there is the problem of what we are going to do with corrections. It will be very costly — it will far exceed the cost in a sewerage system. Trucking and hauling are the only solutions in some places."

He also said a number of properties are contributing to land pollution, with sewage flowing into ditches, Esquimalt Harbor and Craigflower Creek.

"There are too many to be ignored and they are spotted all over the territory," he said.

The health board agreed to issue a public statement on the costs of sewerage and cleaning up present problems.

Underground Phone Wires Spread Out

The second phase of a $6 million B.C. Tel program for Oak Bay and Saanich will begin before the end of the year when new underground ducts and conduit will be laid.

Oak Bay's works and maintenance committee approved the company's plans on Tuesday.

Beginning at the new B.C. Tel building on Foul Bay, underground wiring eventually will run to Oak Bay Avenue, along it and Newport to Currie and Windsor Park.

Company spokesman Glynn Jones said today they will be pulling in cable to underground ducts early next year.

Moderator Of Church To Visit

The new moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada makes his first official visit to Victoria Thursday and will address a public meeting and the Victoria Council of churches at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. Edward H. Johnson, after calling on Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson, will address a public meeting at 1:15 p.m. in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Johnson has been overseas secretary of the board of missions since 1954 and was the first Canadian to penetrate the blockade in Nigeria-Biafra war.

He will discuss the Nigerian conflict in his speech.

TOWER SITTER TO GET LIFT . . . MUSICALLY

To the clang of firebells, Earl Levy will be driven through town Saturday en route to skyborne isolation for the next few weeks.

Beginning at 11 a.m., members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will carry Levy around town in their "fire engine."

Then, at the Mayfair Shopping Centre, they will hoist Levy by ladder to the clock tower where he's volunteered to stay until the current United Red Feather-Red Cross campaign meets its target for the year.

Levy is the well-known doorman at a local motel.

This Club Draws Teenagers

They're Given Plenty to Do

By SUSAN MAYSE

The car on the hoist is 15 years old, but by the time its engine, transmission, and brakes are painstakingly restored, it may rattle on for another 15.

Buying, repairing, and endlessly tinkering on an old car is the dream of thousands of Victoria boys. Only a few can realize it, even if they scrape together enough cash for a clunker.

Automotive tools are expensive—and it's almost impossible to do most jobs with hit-or-miss methods, tools, and garage.

1,000 MEMBERS

That's one reason the Victoria Boys' Club can boast an enthusiastic membership of nearly 1,000 teenaged boys . . . and girls.

Their car repair shop, equipped with tools and space to make most repairs, is popular with boys 16 to 18, says director Robert Boettger.

A volunteer instructor demonstrates once or twice a week the correct way of doing repairs and tuning, and fixing a car can cost a oy as little a car can cost a boy as little as the price of a set of plugs.

Somewhere in a rabbit warren of small rooms upstairs, a radio room strewn with disembowelled televisions, radios, and mysterious electronic gadgetry attracts crowds of younger boys, 13 to 15 years old.

STEADY USE

A photography room equipped for all stages of developing and printing varies in popularity, but the gym and weights room are in almost constant use during the club's open hours after school, evenings, and weekends.

Senior and junior lounges, craft rooms, a woodworking shop, and a library are all part of the club's new addition, completed in 1968.

Instructors show the boys techniques of hobbies and sports from painting to gymnastics.

The club provides activities, sports, and companionship for youngsters whose parents can't afford to enroll them in more expensive clubs.

"The Victoria Boys' Club isn't restricted to kids without a pocketful of money, though," says Boettger. "Our members and our volunteers come from every part of town. There are no restrictions on our membership here."

Most live half a mile to three-quarters of a mile from the Yates Street location of the club—an area that includes in its radius many of the low-income homes of Victoria.

Membership costs $1 a year for 8 to 12-year-olds, and $2 a year for 12 to 18-year-olds, Boettger said.

In addition to regular activities, a community development worker hired for the club with City of Victoria funds goes into city parks and schools, mostly at night, to reach youngsters who won't join a club.

TALK IT OVER

The worker reaches the "tough" element by talking problems out with them in their own areas, and frequently bringing them into the club after hours to use the facilities in a non-pressure atmosphere.

The cost of the year-old building is a burden to the club, and new ideas will be limited by the amount of money the United Red Feather-Red Cross appeal can give the club.

A high percentage of the annual expenses are paid by the United Appeal campaign, and appeal organizers hope to absorb the entire cost of the club—about $50,000 annually—as soon as possible.

MAJOR EXTENSION SET FOR GALLERY

A major extension to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria will be announced at the gallery members' annual meeting Oct. 24.

Gallery director Colin Graham said no information on the extension will be issued before the general meeting.

In a newsletter to members, president R. M. Lane described the extension as "a major new phase in the development of the institution."

He said the announcement would be "the most important one we have made in the past decade."

Arthur Mayse . . .

THERE WAS A TIME, and I can't remember it without a shudder, when such British Columbia wines as the liquor stores carried were popskull of the wildest sort. But that situation has changed for the better, as increasing numbers of Victorians have discovered.

A while ago, we were introduced to a medium dry red wine that was notably pleasant to the taste-buds, and it's no trick at all to find a sparkling white or a rose that is more than merely palatable.

This isn't to suggest that the vineyards of France need fear competition from ours. However, occasional samplings have convinced me that B.C. wines now owe nothing in quality to those produced in Australia, South Africa, California, or the Canadian East.

Although this is still prevailingly beer and hard liquor country, it interests me to note that the juice of the Okanagan grape has achieved a large measure of respectability. Hosts who wouldn't have dreamed of pouring a B.C. wine for their guests 10 years ago now do so quite casually.

★

I'm not influenced by local patriotism in offering this amateur taster's estimate, and by no means all of our wines deserve praise.

Some you may like, and some you won't. As insurance against that last, it's better to experiment with wines in small bottles where possible.

UNTIL THREE WEEKS ago, my wife and I spoke the same language. Then communication difficulties developed, and the gap in understanding widens each Tuesday evening. That's when Win joins a group of linguistic adventurers committed to an adult education course in Japanese conversation.

After the first lesson, I called around for my dear one at Central Junior secondary. She looked more than a little bemused, but her greeting was cheerful.

"Ohio guziamus," she said . . . at least, it sounded like that.

I gave her back a startled, "Huh?"

"I'm sorry," she said. "That was good morning. I should have said 'kumban wa'. That means 'good evening.'

"Well," I said, taking off from the curb with something of a jerk, "there's nothing like jumping in and getting your feet wet."

★

On the way home, Win got in some vocabulary practice, and passed on what she had learned about the polite language.

It wasn't a great deal—after all, this was only the first lesson—but she had plainly enjoyed the session, and I decided to tag along.

That hope ended when I gave her a playback of what I'd picked up in transit.

"I don't want to hurt your feelings," she said, "but my pronunciation's shaky enough as it is. Maybe you'd better stick to English."

★

This I've done, sulkily, through the aftermath of two more lessons, contenting myself with such interpretation as is offered.

Example: "In Japanese, you wouldn't say, "I am going', but 'Going is taking place.'"

And another: "We'd say, 'That's a pen.' In Japanese, it's 'The thing that goes around being a pen.'"

At least, in my role of the party who goes around playing second fiddle to textbook and tape recorder, I am realizing just how difficult our own confusing language must be to those faced with the task of learning it.

At least as hard as Japanese, and nothing like as polite!

TAKE A RAINY NIGHT OF the sort not unknown in Victoria—toss in the glitter, shimmer and sudden blaze of light on shiny-wet blacktop—and a grim sort of guessing game develops.

It's akin to blindman's buff, and its name is 'find the centre-line."

The players are any number of drivers. The penalty for a wrong guess could be anything from a donged fender to a session in hospital, or worse.

★

Admittedly, our streets take a lot of wear, and some much more than others. But surely it isn't too much to expect that when centre-lines wear out, those responsible for the upkeep of these essential traffic guides should see to their renewal.

All through this town and its environs, you will find examples of what I mean. And why so obvious a threat to driver and passenger safety is so badly neglected beats me!

West Keeps It Cool On Red 'Peace Ploy'

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Western countries have held consultations on how to counter what they regard as a Soviet propaganda ploy without appearing to oppose peace.

The problem is created by an item entitled The Strengthening of World Peace that was proposed by the Soviet Union and other East bloc countries and which now is before the political committee of the General Assembly.

The Soviet Union has placed before the committee an Appeal to All States of the World that was introduced first in the General Assembly by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko last month.

The appeal, Western spokesmen say, exonerates the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia last year but calls for withdrawal of United States troops from Vietnam and Israeli troops from captured Arab territories.

But it also has what some regard as pious references to the need for peace, international security and disarmament that cannot be easily rejected.

Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik suggested last Friday that the General Assembly accept the Soviet appeal as is.

OPPOSING OR NOT

But some Western observers say that the appeal is an attempt to rewrite the UN Charter in Soviet terms.

The question was how to counter it without leaving themselves open to a charge that they are opposing efforts to improve peace and international security.

The Soviets have further complicated the Western position by declining, at least at this stage, to introduce a resolution. Western informants point out that a resolution can be amended to take out objectionable points but there is little or no precedent for amending an appeal introduced by a country.

Western countries, including Canada, the United States and Britain, met informally this week to consider what to do about the Soviet ploy. No decision was reached.

The first big power response to the Soviet appeal will be made Thursday when Britain speaks. The major powers have kept silent in the debate since Friday, in fact a meeting of the political committee scheduled for Tuesday was cancelled when only one country, Malta, indicated it would speak.

One Western source said it is hoped to avoid an East-West clash on the appeal. It was hoped to play the matter in a low key "in the hope that it will go away."

ROBBER WAS LOADED; HE SHOT HIMSELF

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "I suppose you think I got no bullets in this," a gunman told patrons at Jack's Tavern. "I guess you think I won't shoot."

He promptly dispelled doubts on both counts by accidentally shooting himself in the leg, police said.

With that he fled Monday night with $400 and two bottles of whisky.

He was captured two blocks away, charged with armed robbery and taken to hospital. He continued Tuesday to refuse to identify himself and was booked as "John Doe."

$30 BILLION SUIT AGAINST DDT FIRMS

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman filed suit in Federal Court Tuesday "on behalf of all the people of the United States" against the principal manufacturers and distributers of DDT and asked for $30,000,000,000 in damages.

Carol A. Yannacene of Patcheque, N.Y., contended that the pesticide has caused widespread damage to the natural resources of the U.S.

The suit said the cost of remedial action to restore the quality of the environment damaged by the defendants was in excess of $10,000,000,000, and under the anti-trust laws triple damages of $30,000,000,000 should be awarded.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

'Meeting of Minds' In Science Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate's two-year investigation into science policy in Canada has found efforts unco-ordinated and divided among governments, universities and industry.

This was the message members of the upper chamber's science policy committee brought to the Senate Tuesday. The Senate resumed sittings Tuesday after a recess that began July 9. The Commons resumes sittings Oct. 22.

Senator Maurice Lamontagne (L—Quebec), chairman of the committee, said the Canadian scientific community has become three main solitudes—governments, universities, industry—which produce an unco-ordinated national science effort.

The committee hopes to report on its inquiry by the end of the year, after 102 meetings, 10,220 pages of evidence, and visits to the United States and western Europe. Its expenditures to date are $107,700

Senator Lamontagne said the inquiry has, for the first time, assembled detailed facts and figures on the national scientific effort. It has also prompted government scientific agencies to review their activities and some had made changes.

'LEAVE US ALONE'

Senator Donald Cameron (Ind. L—Alberta), committee vice-chairman, said scientific research in the provinces has been "pretty much of a laissez-faire operation."

This was not a reflection on the quality of work but to ensure maximum results from research expenditures. There must be a "meeting of minds" among the federal and provincial governments, universities and industry.

He suggested goals for a national science policy should apply to these areas: The spiritual, cultural and educational needs of the country; the social circumstances of the entire national community; the people's physical circumstances; the life and economic welfare of the people; the nation's role on the international scene.

The Senate also heard Senator John Nichol (L—British Columbia) call for new anti-pollution laws, even if it means economic dislocation and the possibility of reimbursing workers of plants shut down by the changed rules.

French Class In Toronto 'Un Succes'

TORONTO (CP) — "Most encouraging."

That's the first month's progress report on Toronto's first French high school, says its principal, Lionel Remillard.

He say Etienne Brule's 300 students are enjoying the freedom of the ungraded system and the choice of options such as Spanish, data processing, consumer education, typing and art, and parents are helping in a night program which will eventually include home economics, guitar playing and making copper jewelry.

Teaching takes place in 13 portable classrooms on another high school's playground. Etienne Brule's students use their host's cafeteria, swimming pool and gymnasium, but as yet do not participate in any intra-school activities except track and field.

SOME PROBLEMS

All classes are in French but conversation between classes in both French and English. A few students, including 10 who are either from Quebec or France, do not speak English, but they are readily helped by classmates, says Mr. Remillard.

He say enrolment dropped slightly after the first few days because some students found transportation a problem, while others were just "shopping" and decided a French school was not for them.

There are problems, but apart from the odd girl straying into a washroom marked "Garcons," few have anything to do with French.

"We are just one school like others," says Mr. Remillard.

DDT Limits Bring Suit

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Smoked Fish Co. has filed a federal lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the Food and Drug Administration's imposition of a maximum level of DDT in fish.

The suit, filed Monday in United States District Court, claims that the level of five parts per million set as the maximum permissible amount is "unreasonable, arbitrary and confiscatory."

The FDA seized 800 pounds of Lake Michigan chubs shipped by the Detroit firm to Pennsylvania last week and said the fish contained between six and seven parts per million of the insecticide.

An FDA official said he believed at least 80 per cent of Lake Michigan chubs contain more DDT than is permitted.

HE NEVER WANTS TO LEAVE U.K. AGAIN

HONG KONG (Reuters)—British journalist Eric Gordon, once sympathetic with the Chinese Communists who imprisoned him and his family for two years, now says he never wants to leave England again.

The 38-year-old newspaperman, who was freed Tuesday, looked pale and exhausted at a news conference today. He almost broke down when he said he and his family could not believe they were actually free.

Hospital Strike Vote Set

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of 42,000 non-medical hospital workers voted Tuesday to reject the latest wage offer from the Quebec Hospitals Association and hold a strike vote Oct. 31.

The offer of a 17.2-per-cent increase over three years was rejected 310 to 50 by the National Federation of Services (CNTU) at a special two-day convention.

The strike vote was scheduled for Oct. 31. The Quebec government was urged to appoint a mediator in the meantime to try to settle the 17-month contract dispute.

The union seeks a 22-per-cent increase to raise the minimum weekly salary to about $72 from $59.

Also after new contracts are 12,000 workers with the Canadian Union of Public Employees, affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor. Nurses, medical technologists and engineering groups make up the remaining parties and bring the total to 84,000 employees.

The conciliation period for CUPE ends Oct. 25.

Public Image of Labor Distorted By Dramatism of Strike—Leader

By PAUL DUNN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The labor movement in Canada has a distorted public image, union leaders agree. In their search for the cause they are looking at their own public relations as well as the news media.

Donald MacDonald, president of the 1,700,000-member Canadian Labor Congress, says public reaction to labor ranges from lack of interest to "open hostility."

Mr. MacDonald spoke as one of several labor leaders asked by The Canadian Press to comment on labor's image, factors shaping it, proposals for improvement. All said they feel labor unions are tarred with a strike-happy image that isn't supported by the facts.

Bryce Mackasey, the federal labor minister, agrees:

"It is natural that strikes will get more publicity than the peaceful settlements which occur in the industrial relations environment.

"Strikes are dramatic . . . breadwinners out of work, public inconvenienced, picketing going on and often the possibility of violence.

"Strikes do make news, and this is not going to change. But when one considers that of 1,000 contract negotiations carried out last year within the jurisdiction of the Canada department of labor only 165 required federal assistance and only eight resulted in a strike, one is tempted to wonder why this fact is not brought home more forcefully to the public."

STRIKES INFREQUENT

And that, in a nutshell, is the point made by all of the labor leaders interviewed: Strikes are infrequent—likely one per cent or less in most jurisdictions of all the contracts negotiated—but it's the walkout, the "police and pickets clash" headlines that get the attention of the public.

Marcel Pepin, president of the 250,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, lifted a bulky folder of press clippings from his desk in Montreal and said, there are virtually "no stories of contract settlements—unless there is a strike."

When settlements came peaceably, no publicity resulted "but let there be a bomb . . ."

'Peaceful Settlements . . .

Both the CLC and CNTU are preparing briefs for Senator Keith Davey's committee which will look into the news media and their impact on the public.

Trevor Gough of Ottawa, executive vice-president of the 120,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada, said people not connected with labor "generally have an unfavorable view of labor."

"Many still think a public servant is overpaid and underworked. . . . This was possibly true during the Depression but not now.

"The press has never attempted to update the image of the public service."

BULK ARE PEACEFUL

Mr. Mackasey and union leaders agreed neither government nor labor has done much to publicize the fact that the great bulk of contracts are signed without strikes. None could produce statistics covering an extended period showing how most contracts are settled.

"Until fairly recently," Mr. Mackasey said, "the Canada department of labor collected information on contracts concluded without federal assistance only when they involved very large numbers of workers. We now are, however, keeping track of peaceful settlements in the smaller bargaining units."

His department has just begun consultations with provincial labor departments to develop a system of joint reporting of all settlements. Agreement has already been reached with Ontario.

Upon request, the federal department worked up this breakdown of agreements involving units of 500 or more employees signed under federal jurisdiction for the three-month period ended last July 31.

Agreements 27; employees 43,090; by direct bargaining 17 agreements; with a conciliation officer seven; with a conciliation board one; post-conciliation bargaining one; arbitration none; work stoppage one.

CONCERN REFLECTED

In the same quarter in provincial jurisdictions 85 agreements were concluded, involving 112,535 employees, with 35 settlements through direct bargaining and nine after work stoppages.

The strike by some 40,000 Ontario steelworkers is not reflected in the figures as settlement had not been reached in July.

The labor movement's concern about its image is reflected in the growth of public relations activities within the movement. Although the CLC has had a public relations division for some time, Mr. MacDonald said awareness of the need for such a program is relatively recent.

He said the over-all effect of all news media treatment of labor's role in inflation has been discriminatory.

"It has never been established whether labor wage increases per se are independently inflationary."

He had little to criticize about individual reporters,

. . . Don't Make Headlines'

other than to ask "how many labor reporters are there in Canada?" But media management and some editorial writers and columnists have helped distort labor's image, he said.

Mr. Pepin said newspapers "try to correspond to the mentality of the public . . . but they shape public opinion."

In the main, news-page stories were fair but editorials were unfavorable to his organization. Just recently more than 20 reporters from all media attended a CNTU news conference and briefing that lasted five hours.

"But their stories appeared on page 48. . . . If I had announced a strike, they would have put out a special edition."

He said that in the 1962-66 period, the CNTU was involved in 40 strikes or lockouts lasting two weeks or longer—only stoppages of that duration are recorded—and 98.5 per cent of its autonomous affiliates were not involved in any such stoppages.

Germ War Threats Examined

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—After years of debate on nuclear and conventional disarmament, the United Nations is now turning its attention to the peril to mankind posed by biological and chemical weapons.

Britain and the Soviet Union have submitted draft treaties to the 126-nation General Assembly on the subject.

Biological warfare would employ as weapons such dread diseases as bubonic plague, anthrax, Rocky Mountain spotted fever and yellow fever in forms that could not be resisted by known countermeasures.

Chemical warfare would include use of tear gas and nerve gas with the latter considered the deadliest.

In advance of the session, Secretary-General U Thant released a report prepared by 14 international experts declaring that use of bacteriological and chemical weapons could lead to horrors beyond control of mankind.

"Were these ever to be used on a large scale in war no one could predict how enduring their effect would be and how they would affect the structure of the society and environment in which we live," the experts concluded

In obvious warning that mankind could be subjected to some kind of "doomsday bug," they said the overriding danger would apply as much to the country which initiated use of biological weapons as to the one which was attacked.

Agreement on a treaty is not in sight at this session of the assembly, but the debate was certain to reflect mounting concern over biochemical weaponry.

Underworld In Business

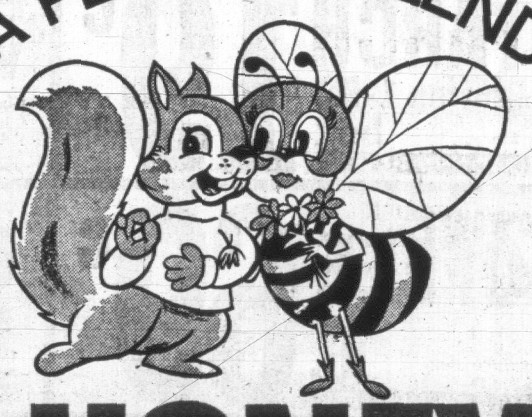

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Internal Revenue Service studied the finances of 113 underworld figures and found 98 of them involved in legitimate businesses, the New York Times said here Tuesday.

The Times says that these 98 gangsters were involved in 159 businesses, including 32 casinos or nightclubs, 17 realty enterprises, 11 hotels and motels, 10 vending machine companies, eight restaurants, eight trucking firms, seven wholesale food distributorships, seven sports and entertainment firms and six finance institutions.

The name of the racketeers and their firms were not revealed by the IRS because of continuing tax investigations, The Times says.

For Homework These Pupils Watch TV

By SUSAN RILEY

DUNCAN—For 91 students at Lake Cowichan Secondary School watching television is homework.

They take Jev Tothill's television survey course and the classroom is a studio.

Three mobile cameras, a control unit, a picture file and lighting equipment cover blackboards.

The course has no strict boundaries and spills over into news shows, commercial making and film-making.

Much of the work is done at home.

One student took one of four eight-millimetre cameras and constructed a Plasticine forest in his basement. He synchronized the music of A Walk Through the Black Forest with the movement of his

. . . class a studio

Plasticine trees. The two-minute surrealistic effort earned him an "A" and a department of education prize.

"They put in a lot of time on films," says Tothill. "A two-minute tape can mean as long as 30 hours' preparation."

●

Every morning at 9 students spend a frenzied hour putting together a three or four-minute newscast which is shown in other classrooms in the school on closed-circuit TV sets.

They cut down radio station CKAY wire copy and use rewrites from newspapers to compile the three-minute script which is then solemnly read by a student announcer.

There are no "stars" in this operation.

"We share the work around. In other words the same person won't be on camera every day and the same person doesn't always announce. Sometimes it means a sacrifice in quality but at least everyone ends up knowing something about everything."

●

So long-haired girls wrestle with a maze of wires in an audio unit while others disassemble complicated mobile equipment for practice.

The class videotapes special events from Regional Board meetings to track meets. These are made into documentary or public affairs programs and show in social studies classrooms.

Tohill would like to show some of these student efforts in the community over cablevision.

The Canadian Radio and Television Commission meeting soon in Vancouver will be considering a change in rules which will allow school-made shows to enter the community living room, he says.

"That way we could videotape community events like the walkathon this weekend and show it locally.

"And some of the good interview shows my students do could be seen by the community."

●

A schedule hangs on the control room wall. It outlines programs to be sent to classrooms throughout the day. Many of them come from Channel 9 in Seattle, an educational television station. Others are films videotaped from other channels and some like the newscast originate in the classroom studio.

Tothill's students handle the technical end of sending these shows out in their spare moments.

Half the emphasis is placed on technical knowhow; the other half on content.

Tothill uses electronic teaching aids to teach elementary electronics. Slides with synchronized sound contain lessons on lighting, camera operation and other technical aspects of television. These slides are filed beside a projector and students are free to investigate them if they run into trouble.

●

Because Tothill's job as television co-ordinator for the district takes him to other schools, students are left on their own sometimes. They have slides and two or three senior students who have taken the course before to question when difficulties arise.

"Without these students I just couldn't take the time I do to get everything done."

By June each will have written and produced a three-minute television show.

Topics range from rock groups to earthworms to drag racing.

Students write a script, find suitable audio accompaniment—a narrative, music or sounds—and co-ordinate the two. Final production of shows will be undertaken by the class as a whole and the best ones will be sent out to the rest of the school.

●

"Television is our number one recreational activity and it is important that we understand it," says Tothill.

"We must be sophisticated enough to viewers to know what is behind a show. I hope students will look at television more critically having been behind the cameras."

Television, the media of the present, is a popular course.

"We had to turn a lot away again this year.

"I hope in the future we will have more equipment and more staff. Television is important in schools. It takes in many aspects of learning. Students learn more than just television.

"And someday I hope we can move out into the community."

150 TO RUN IN B.C. MEET

DUNCAN — About 150 athletes will compete Saturday in the British Columbia cross-country championships on Bazett's Farm, Bazett Rd.

North Cowichan Mayor Don Morton, Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife and Operation Recreation chairman Pat Moore will open the meet sponsored by the Cowichan Valley Athletic Club.

CHASING GREASED PIGS brought hard cash to the Salt Spring Centennial Park organization recently. With the sale of home cooking and hot dogs for the spectators, sale of tickets for the spectacle raised $850 for the park's maintenance.

Saturna School Complies With Health Regulations

The Saturna Island Free School is in the process of complying with regulations set out earlier this year by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

The board was informed Tuesday, in a letter from school principal Tom Durrie to senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, that a septic tank field is being laid, kitchen renovations and work in a bathroom are completed and central heating is being installed.

An inspection by the health board of the improvements will be made shortly to see if conditions are satisfactory.

In other business, the board:

● Approved hiring part-time physicians to fill the vacancy caused by the departure earlier of Dr. G. P. Evans;

● Heard that advertisements have been placed for a replacement to Dr. T. J. Bailey, assistant medical health officer, who has left;

● That Health Minister Loffmark be asked to clarify his stated position that bringing metro health under the Capital Regional District is still under study, while there has been a comment from deputy health minister Dr. J. A. Taylor, according to Dr. Whitbread, that there will be no regionalization of health services.

Islanders Want A Sound Ferry

SOINTULA — The 800 residents of the Malcolm Island community of Sointula are determined to get a more seaworthy ferry.

The aging Sointula Queen ferry was taken off service Monday to receive a check-up after parents of school children protested the unseaworthiness of the vessel. A leak was found in her stern.

Parents want the ferry replaced with a steel-hulled vessel capable of carrying cars. They complain their children lost 24 days of school last year because the ferry couldn't be used in bad weather.

Beginning Tuesday, school children will be transported across the Queen Charlotte Strait in the Harbor Princess, owned and operated by Harbor Ferries Ltd.

Provincial ferries superintendent S. E. Blanchard said it will cost $800 a day for the round trip for the children. Other passengers may also be boarded on the run.

Blanchard said the inspection of the Sointula Queen could take four or five days. If repairs are necessary they will be carried out in a Victoria yard.

Federal inspectors had said the check was necessary after two of them had inspected the ferry.

Special Fracture Cure For Animals Perfected

TORONTO (CP) — A Vancouver-born veterinarian has developed a new treatment for broken bones which have torn through an animal's skin and caused infection.

Dr. Bob Williams, 42, who left Vancouver in 1945 for Ontario, made the veterinary breakthrough at the nearby Bramalea Animal Hospital, using a glass-fibre cast to heal a cat's broken, infected leg in 18 days.

He had been experimenting with glass fibre as a lighter substitute for the conventional plaster cast which is too cumbersome for use on an animal's broken bone. He had previously used it to heal the legs of cats and dogs which were broken but not infected.

The new cast brought a double healing. While the bone mended, the resin in the glass fibre produced heat up to 180 degrees, the temperature at which milk is pasteurized.

Dr. Williams says that when he removed the cast the bone had not only mended stronger than it would have with a plaster cast, but bacteria deep down in the bone had been pasteurized out of existence.

ENDS THE AGONY

Normally, a cat in this ninth-life condition would either: (a) be destroyed; (b) have its leg amputated; (c) have it put in splints for a week while the wound healed and then in a plaster cast for three weeks while the bone mended.

Furthermore, if any infection remained after the first week, a huge ulcer might form under the cast, requiring much longer to heal.

The revolutionary cast can end all that agony. "It opens up a whole new field," says Dr. Williams, who attended Vancouver's John Oliver high school and the University of British Columbia before going on to the University of Guelph, Ont.

Two days after the cast came off, Dr. Williams says, the history-making cat could walk, run, climb and leap.

SPOTS RARE DISEASE

Although he has not yet had a chance to mend a more complicated broken jawbone he says he is confident his method will work.

This is not the first feather in the cap of the son of a former Canadian Kennel Club president, Vic Williams, now a retired civil servant living in Vancouver.

Last year Dr. Williams diagnosed the rare Cushing's disease in a dog. To save the dog's life he had to assume his diagnosis was correct and perform a delicate operation before receiving a laboratory report from California. The report confirmed his diagnosis.

Married with three children, Dr. Williams now lives in nearby Brampton, Ont. He has developed his new cast, soon to be used all over the world, for purely altruistic reasons—to save animals' lives. He won't make a cent from it.

Dangerous Drivers

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — Australia has the world's highest road fatality record at 28 deaths for every 100,000 persons, says A. K. Clarke, deputy commissioner of the Victoria state motor car insurance office.

Asbestos Use Queried By Doctor

TORONTO (CP) — An article to appear in the Autumn issue of the Canadian Cancer Society's national newsletter says a cancer of the lining of the lung may result from exposure to asbestos.

The cancer, called mesothelioma, may cause a re-examination of modern building techniques which call for the use of asbestos. The article says this was the opinion of Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond, vice-president of the American Cancer Society, who discussed this cancer at a recent Cancer Orientation Institute for Science Writers at Annville, Pa.

The article quotes Dr. Hammond as saying that until recently only 15 to 20 cases of mesothelioma were uncovered annually in the United States. But he said the rate is climbing in the U.S. and Canada and has been found frequently among asbestos miners in South Africa, Poland, Finland and Czechoslovakia.

Dr. Hammond said it is a serious problem because the use of asbestos in building has increased in the last few years.

WORSE THAN SMOKING

"On the face of it, the use of asbestos would seem to be more serious than smoking as a threat to health because cigarettes are not essential, but it would be extremely difficult to build skyscrapers, or power plants, or any one of a number of constructions without using asbestos for insulation," the article quotes Dr. Hammond as saying.

The article says that in Canada a national committee to study the asbestos problem has been organized under the sponsorship of the occupational health division of the federal department of national health and welfare.

It says special studies are being conducted in the asbestos-producing areas of Thetford Mines and Asbestos in Quebec and Cassiar in British Columbia.

In addition, the International Union Against Cancer has organized a committee under Dr. J. C. Gilson of Cardiff, Wales, to collect evidence on the disease from across the world.

Versatility Impresses Critics

By JAMES CONWAY

LONDON (CP) — Critics here are impressed at the new range displayed by Canadian actor Christopher Plummer as the primitive god-king of the ancient Incas—a dramatic change from his previous urbane movie roles.

Although the film version of Peter Shaffer's London and Broadway hit, The Royal Hunt of the Sun, received only a lukewarm verdict from reviewers here, Plummer's barbaric, physical performance as the Inca Atahualpa whose vast South American empire crumbled before the invading Spanish conquistadors has been declared outstanding.

"He succeeds brilliantly in giving us the scent and feeling of a civilization which is completely at odds with our own" comments The Guardian.

And The Evening Standard says "his animalistic attributes and athletic poses, flinging out his chest like a jeweller's showcase, fuse together into a weirdly original creation."

"Plummer has done nothing better on the screen," says The Daily Mirror.

The Financial Times compares the Toronto-born actor to "some weird comical bird, fluttering, hissing and squeaking, capturing something of the needed formal quality."

PORTRAYAL BIZARRE

Praising his "bizarrely effective" portrayal of the 16th century king who believed himself immortal, Standard critic Alexander Walker says Plummer "looks like an overfed bird of paradise when he first appears before the Spaniards who have come to conquer his country for the honor of God and the love of gold."

"Gradually a beak of a nose sticks out, a single eye blinks warily, a cheep is heard inside the plumage. When the sun-baked majesty is tempted out by the offer of a Bible, he sniffs it like a dog, claws it like a cat, licks it like a chimpanzee and whinnies his distrust like a prairie pony scenting an ambush."

Originally staged by Sir Laurence Olivier's National Theatre company, the play relied on stark symbolism and theatrical ritual to convey the Spaniards' greedy hunger for gold which destroyed the Inca civilization and the strange relationship between the expedition's godless leader Pizarro and the pagan Inca king worshipped by his subjects as the son of the sun.

Expanded on the big screen, some critics have found the treatment less effective.

"We get practically nothing worth while from the unit's long stay in Peru save the sun grandly setting or rising over the mountains which could as well have served as a backdrop for Randolph Scott as for Atahualpa," says The Guardian.

Macaroni and Cheese

Start heating oven to 350° F. Cook 1 lb. of elbow macaroni until tender, as directions state. Drain; combine with ¾ cup of milk, 1 cup canned or cooked green beans and 2 cans of undiluted cream of chicken soup. Pour into 12"x7"x2" baking dish. Alternate overlapping slices of cheese, about ½ lb., with 3 or 4 sliced tomatoes on top. Bake about 25 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

VIETNAM MORATORIUM SPREADS outside the United States today, as two unidentified U.S. girls in Tokyo fasten black armbands under watchful eye of Japanese policeman. The one-day demonstration for an end to the war in Vietnam is expected to involve Americans around the world.

New York Trouble Spots Eyed

NEW YORK (AP) — A new police command post is using television cameras to keep an eye on trouble spots in New York.

Mayor John Lindsay and Police Commissioner Howard Leary put the command centre—a windowless room with giant, wall-mounted television screens—into operation Monday at police headquarters.

The facility and its equipment cost the city $410,000. It has three functions:

● A special police television network of fixed and mobile cameras will enable headquarters to follow demonstrations and other events as they occur throughout the city. Fixed cameras now cover City Hall Plaza and will be set up at Times Square, Madison Square Garden and United Nations Plaza. Others will be mounted on trucks and police helicopters.

● The command post will be connected by a direct line to a special telephone in each of the city's 78 precincts and several other police units. At the beginning of each shift, after consulting with sergeants in charge and using a small computer, the centre will prepare a table showing exactly how many men are on duty and where they are.

● The command post itself—with its huge screens upon which television pictures, tables and detailed maps can be projected—will mean faster and more efficient police response to calls.

Reality and Rhetoric Diverge In Vietnam Public Debating

By HENRY OWEN

WASHINGTON (WP) — The last few weeks have seen a widening gulf between reality and rhetoric in public debate over Vietnam.

What's actually been happening about Vietnam?

● The process of U.S. withdrawal has begun. The second withdrawal was larger than the first, and future ones will presumably be larger still. Press reports suggest that the United States will withdraw about half of its forces by the end of 1970.

● South Vietnamese leaders appear to accept this. They have publicly proclaimed their confidence that they can replace all U.S. ground combat forces by the end of 1970. They ask for a definitive schedule of U.S. withdrawals and material aid, to help them in this task.

● U.S. casualties have been way down for two weeks running.

In short, the shift of U.S. forces to a greatly reduced role and level, foreshadowed by Secretary Laird in his Time magazine interview is going forward.

One would expect public debate to focus on this process—with the president's supporters pointing with pride to the fact that he has a coherent plan for replacing U.S. forces, and critics asking hard questions about the means of carrying it out and where it leads over the long run.

This would be a useful debate. But instead, what we are actually all talking about are two rather unlikely alternatives:

Total withdrawal of ALL U.S. forces—ground and air, combat and support—in a year; and an early formal political settlement of the war.

The reason for this turn in the debate may be found in that random process which, Tolstoy argued, is the principal shaper of our destinies.

It all began when Senator Goodell of New York asked the Congress to resolve that all U.S. forces in Vietnam should be withdrawn before the end of 1970. This was a natural enough expression of his and his constituents' concern over the war.

It has not commended itself to most of the Congress; Senator Saxbe of Ohio, a leading critic of the war, evidently spoke for many of his colleagues when he called it unrealistic.

No one expected President Nixon to endorse Senator Goodell's proposal, since it seemed to conflict directly with the administration's "vietnamization" strategy. If the United States were to announce that it would withdraw all troops in little more than a year, the South Vietnamese would despair of filling the gap so quickly; resulting demoralization in Saigon would make it difficult to mobilize the increased South Vietnamese effort needed to make "Vietnamization" work.

But the administration did not base its opposition to Senator Goodell's proposal on these grounds. Instead, it stressed the adverse effect that this proposal would have on prospects for a formal settlement—and asked for a show of national unity, to help get such a settlement more quickly.

The administration is right: Hanoi would have little motive to negotiate if it expected all U.S. forces to be out before the end of 1970. But there is a large question as to whether, even if Hanoi did not expect this to happen, a formal political settlement would soon follow.

There is little evidence to suggest that Hanoi has been sacrificing the flower of its manhood for four years just to get free elections in South Vietnam; there is considerable evidence to suggest that it is fighting to reunite what it considers to be one country.

If so, it may react to even the most imaginative proposals for free elections about as enthusiastically as Lincoln would have responded to proposals that he settle the Civil War by arranging for the people of the Confederacy to vote on whether they should rejoin the Union.

All this doesn't prove that there will never be a political settlement; but it does suggest that it may be a long time coming, if at all, and then probably only after Hanoi has been convinced by prolonged experience that the process of Vietnamization and U.S. withdrawal can go forward successfully.

Calls for total early withdrawal and for national unity in seeking an early political settlement thus focus attention on what are, in faet, the least likely outcomes to the war.

Marijuana Support Stuns Congress Body

WASHINGTON (WP) A congressman Tuesday publicly opposed any laws against the use and possession of marijuana.

Rep. Richard N.C. Nix (D—Pa.) shocked a hearing of the House Select Committee on Crime with the statement, "I don't see how you can say it's a crime to either possess or use this drug."

●

Later, the Philadelphia congressman called laws against the use of marijuana "an invasion of the constitutional rights of citizens."

'I want someone to justify that use and possession is a crime," he said. "No one has ever done that. I don't see how anyone can justify it on available information."

That Word Leads To Damage Suit

BOSTON (AP) — A high school teacher suspended for using a four letter word in class has filed a $50,000 damage suit in U.S. District Court.

Robert J. Keefe of Brookline said in the suit filed Tuesday that he used the word before a senior class of boys as "a purely intellectual abstraction."

"The discussion was devoted to its use and was no more than five or 10 minutes," the suit said.

On the opening day of school this year, the suit said, Keefe discussed an article written by Yale University Prof. Robert J. Lirton in the Atlantic Monthly's educational edition.

The four letter word was in the article.

Keefe said the school committee suspended him and threatened dismissal.

The suspension was a violation of free speech and due process and equal protection under the 14th amendment of the U.S. constitution and infringed on academic freedom, the suit contended.

Keefe said he has suffered emotional economic harm and damage to his professional standing and reputation.

Keefe said he was suspended for seven days.

Quebec Provincial Police Head Rose Through Ranks

By KARIN MOSER

MONTREAL (CP)—The man who once earned $12 a week for pounding a daily 13-hour beat found himself temporarily in charge of metropolitan Montreal's police and a 600-man army as Canada's largest city reeled from the blows of rioting.

At 49, Maurice St. Pierre, director of the Quebec Provincial Police, put years of specialized training and a love for "systems" into action to bring calm to the city.

The trilingual director continued to wield his authority as left-wing separatist groups threatened to march on city hall demanding the resignations of Mayor Jean Drapeau and Lucien Saulnier, executive committee chairman, in the wake of a 16-hour strike last week by Montreal police.

However, the demonstration was broken up before it could materialize.

Before it began Friday, the director stated: "It is well understood that I have granted no permit for a parade and no request has been made to the Montreal authorities. Consequently there is no permit."

SITUATION UNIQUE

"I urgently plead with the general public not to attempt to reach the scene of any meeting, grouping, or parade nor to participate in any demonstration."

For the moustached, pipe-smoking director, the situation may well stand out as unique in his career.

On Dec. 27, 1968, he was named to his present position as head of the QPP. Before that, he worked directly under Montreal Police Director Jean-Paul Gilbert.

On Wednesday, Mr. Gilbert found himself in the position of taking orders from Mr. St. Pierre.

Described by officers who have worked with or under him as a "gentleman and a perfectionist," Mr. St. Pierre's pleas to the public have been firm but reasonable, his dispatching of orders faultless.

Before being promoted to sergeant in 1948, he had seen duty on foot and in prowl cars, done a stint as a traffic officer and spent five years with a motorcycle squad.

In January, he announced that the QPP had established closer ties with international crime fighting agencies such as Interpol, the FBI and the RCMP.

RIOT SQUAD TRAINS

Also in January, a 50-man contingent from the provincial police began training at headquarters to cope with possible riots, demonstrations and parades.

In February came word that high-level talks were being held to create an anti-crime "task force." The idea was to mold a strike force from the three police bodies.

In March, Mr. St. Pierre announced the formation of a computerized operations centre in which all Quebec police forces will have immediate access to data on criminal activity which will be processed in the QPP centre.

When the Montreal area was hit with a rash of bombings, word came from the office of the director that the combined anti-bomb squad was being beefed up to 600 men and 100 vehicles.

And in June, he proclaimed Montreal will not become a "hippie haven."

"These people may yell and scream about their liberty, but they forget that they are not the only ones whose liberty must be protected."

FATHER OWNED STORE

A veteran of 27 years with Montreal's police department, Mr. St. Pierre was born the son of a Montreal grocery store owner.

He was raised in the city's north-end "Little Italy" district.

After graduating from the University of Montreal in 1939 with a political and social science diploma, he joined the Provincial Bank of Canada as an accountant.

He served in seven bank branches in the Montreal area before he decided to join the force.

As a sergeant he took charge of investigations into accidents involving police department personnel and vehicles.

In 1951, he was instrumental in establishing the hit-and-run squad which Sgt. St. Pierre headed until being promoted to captain in 1955.

Five months later he was named assistant inspector. He became assistant-chief inspector in 1959 and chief inspector in 1963.

He was made assistant-director of operations three years later, becoming responsible for all uniformed men, crime prevention, the traffic department and the canine squad.

Comet Discovered

TOKYO (Reuters) — Three Japanese amateur astronomers —one a 17-year-old high school boy—have claimed the discovery of a new comet, the Tokyo Astronomical Observatory announced Tuesday. The comet, described as having a brightness of the 10th magnitude, was first spotted on Oct. 10. The other sightings came two nights later.

COLOMBO PLAN CONFERENCE RECEPTION

Secretary-General John G. Hadwen was host at a reception at the Empress Hotel Tuesday evening for delegates and officials here for opening day of the Colombo Plan conference. Pictured above are three of the Canadian interpreters at the conference, most of whom speak three or four languages, and an information officer. They are from left, Mrs. John Cheng, Ottawa; Miss Bethany Armstrong, Ottawa; Miss Lucille Lee, Ottawa, and Ruth Weiscke, information officer, from Hull. Delegates to the conference include several women from eastern countries. Pictured below, from left, are Miss Daw Hla Kyi, Burma; Miss Eufronia M. Recaido, vice-consul, the Philippines; Mrs. Daw Myint Myint Than, Burma, and Mrs. Pura Santillan-Castrence, ambassador, the Philippines. A number of other receptions, tours and concerts have been arranged for delegates during the three-week conference.

Dishwasher Fish-Fry Fit for Gourmet

TORONTO (CP) — Got a bigger fish than your oven will hold? Two enterprising Toronto women faced with the problem cooked theirs in the dishwasher.

Mrs. R. William Finlayson says: "It was a seven-pound salmon, fresh from the Gaspe. I put chopped celery and onions and herbs on the top, then wrapped it in two layers of extra-heavy foil and folded it tight at the ends. I laid it flat in the dishwasher and let it go through two full cycles. You've never tasted better salmon."

Mrs. Telfer R. Hanson had to cope with an Arctic char.

"The dishwasher is the answer unless you have one of those huge copper steamers our grandmother had. I've thought of buying one, but you'd have to store it, and what's more, grandmothers had wood stoves and could just put the steamer on top. We'd have to hang it over two burners and the heat would not be even.

"I did the char with celery and bayleaf, in the foil, and laid it corner to corner over the cutlery rack. We had some French guests and they raved about the gourmet fish. After dinner she asked me about it and you should have seen her face when I told her how I'd done it. It didn't strike me until later, but I hope she doesn't tell them in Paris that Canadians cook everything in the dishwasher."

Chinese and English At Bilingual Meeting

Guest Speaker Mayor Charlotte

Charlotte Whitton, five times mayor of Ottawa, will speak on The Angry, the Anxious, and the Ageing as the guest of the local Women's Canadian Club Tuesday.

Miss Whitton, who has also been a comptroller and alderman of Ottawa, has been involved in government and advisory work since 1917 when she graduated from Queen's University with a MA.

She is the author of several books, and has been awarded many Canadian and British Empire medals for service.

She will speak at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Empress Hotel Ballroom.

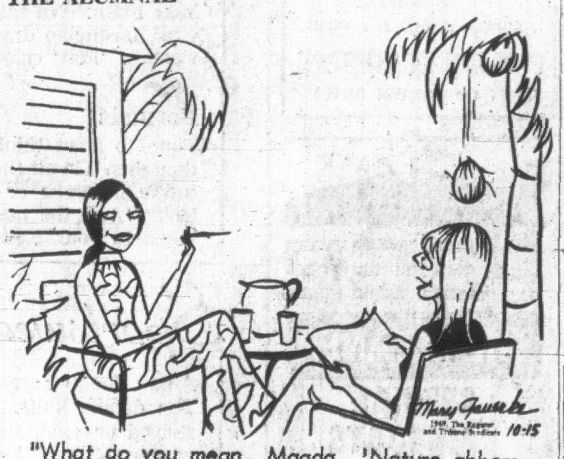

Hymns and devotionals in Chinese as well as English formed part of a recent ecuminical meeting at which members of Oak Bay United Church Women were hosts to women from the Chinese Presbyterian Church and the Chinese Pentecostal Church.

Miss Grace Lee spoke on the founding of the Chinese Presbyterian Church 76 years ago and the role it has played in Victoria's Chinese community.

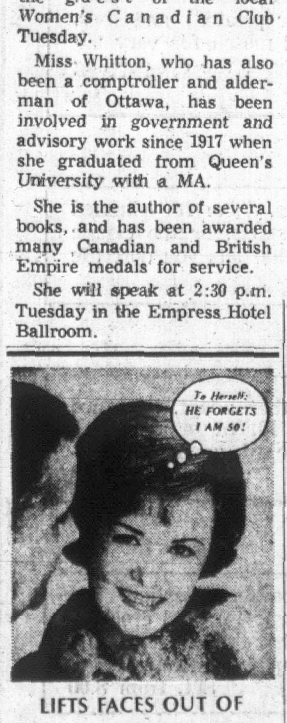

She, along with a Miss Scott, started a kindergarten in the predominantly non-Christian community, eventually interesting many parents in joining the church.

The church also sponsors classes in Chinese and English.

LIFTS FACES OUT OF LINES, WRINKLES, SAG

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking. That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

It may not rival the biggest aspidistra in the world, but it is a monster dahlia. KNIT AND CHAT

Special Heavy Yarn Excellent For Washable Carriage Cover

Dear May: There is a heavy polyprolene yarn on the market—is it practical? Can it be washed safely, and will the garment keep it's shape?

I would like to try it on a carriage cover for our grandchild, but cannot find a pattern. I haven't time to knit one with fine yarn so I need a quick knit pattern. — Mrs. H. M.

I know the yarn that you are referring to, and it would be perfect to make a carriage cover with, in fact I intend to make one myself before Christmas.

I think you'll find the average carriage cover is about 18 inches wide and about 24 inches long. The polyprolene yarn is best worked on No. 4 needles, and it produces a tension of four stitches to the inch in width and five rows to the inch in depth.

So for 18 inches, you will need 72 stitches on the needle. For a two-inch border all round of seed or moss-stitch, work eight stitches at either end of the needle in this stitch, and 10 rows of the same stitch at the beginning and end of work.

The centre panel can be worked in simple stocking-stitch, and you can use a large matching or contrasting satin bow for trim. If you decide to work a lacy stitch on the centre panel of 56 stitches, this can look very attractive too, if you line the wrong side with either matching or contrasting material.

Another reader writes: "I have found that if I place a piece of wax paper over the buttonhole spot and place it under the buttonhole attachment, I can then remove the small piece of paper and start sewing the buttonhole. This works fine on bulky, furry and heavy knits." It certainly seems like a tip worth trying!

This adorable little Panda bear is made of simple crochet. The parts are quite quick to work, you'll probably find yourself making more than one for gifts. Small fry will love them and it is a good way to use up oddments of yarn.

To order Leaflet No. 6866, send 35 cents in coin or money order, (no stamps or personal cheques please). Your order must be accompanied with a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to:—May E. Mac Lean, Knit and Chat, care of the Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering. Allow three weeks for delivery.

Heavy wool is used for the crocheted panda bear, so that the pieces are quick to make. They are sewn together easily to make excellent gifts.

Students Claim Women Forced Into Dependence

LAKE ISLE, Alta (CP — The Alberta Association of Students has decided women are being exploited physically, economically and socially.

Delegates at the Association's fall conference here, 40 miles west of Edmonton, adopted a resolution urging curtailment of exploitation, such as beauty contests, after a discussion led by Jeanne McGuire of Winnipeg.

Miss McGuire, speaking on women's liberation, said women are judged on non-human standards.

She said women are discriminated against in employment because there is not much chance for advancement.

"The fact that you can't get ahead forces you into economic dependence on a man."

Miss McGuire said women's liberation movements do not consider men enemies.

Women do not have to dominate men, "But we don't even challenge men."

Miss McGuire said the goal for women is to become more human.

About 100 delegates representing university, college, technical and nursing students, also agreed the cost of post-secondary education is an "unrealistic financial burden."

The Association agreed to work toward the abolition of tuition fees at all post-secondary institutions and decided to ask member institutions to formulate policy on discrimination against Indian, Metis and Eskimo people.

Cage Keeps Leaves From Filling Gutter

By PENNY SAVER

"Oh Wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being," I sang, exultantly stomping through a shower of leaves. "Feel that nip in the air; look at all that sunshine! Autumn is beyond a doubt the loveliest season of the year."

My husband, who was busy securing a ladder against the house, wasn't thrilled.

"Remember where Shelly went next? Leaves —pestilence stricken multitudes of them. In the drains, of course."

"There must be some way to keep them out of the drainpipes." I said hopefully.

"There is," he grumbled. "But I have to clean them first. Now, kindly hold that ladder steady."

After cleaning a year's accumulated trash out of the gutters, my husband provided each drainpipe with a little cage to keep leaves from slipping in and possibly getting stuck half way down.

These little cages are 59 cents each and remind me of octopuses. Each has a rounded "head" about the size of a large light bulb and many little "legs" of galvanized wire that are squished together and put into the top of the drainpipe.

These handy little gadgets could be used in swimming pool drains, sink drains—anywhere you can find a way to attach them. They might even be used to protect bare lightbulbs from flying objects.

When Mathilda moved into her house, she discovered that a stove had been included in the sale. It works fine, but had a large chip out of the side that bothered her more and more each day.

Then she discovered a remedy in the form of a little 65 cent bottle of what looks like white paint

This is a porcelain repair fluid that will cover chips and scratches on any white porcelain surface. It will not yellow.

Just brush it on and let it dry, adding thin layer after thin layer (30 minutes drying time between each) until the chip is completely covered.

A steam iron that is clogged with minerals won't steam properly but most of us are just too lazy—or forgetful—to take proper precautions every time we want to press a shirt.

A steam iron that is clogged can be cleaned with a special fluid that costs 49 cents for a 4-ounce bottle. This dissolves the minerals and clears all the little vents and passages.

There is also a similar fluid that will clean accumulated minerals from kettles. It is the same price and, like the steam iron cleaner, comes in a non-breakable plastic bottle.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for information on this column.

Bank Teller TV Personality

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — A Fresno bank teller has become a television personality right on her job.

The bank has replaced Mrs. Jean Fryer's teller booth with a console and television cameras that allow her to see her audience—some 90 drive-in bank customers a day—and they also can watch her on a television screen above their cars.

It's one of the first such operations in California.

Seated behind her complicated console far from customers in the lower-level drive-in area, Mrs. Fryer can see everything that transpires in the drive-in area via television cameras. That includes an occasional dog who happens to trot through.

When a patron drives in she watches for anything unusual. She then hits a switch and her face appears on a screen in the customer area. She converses with the customer on a two-way speaker while the patron places checks, cash and other banking paper in a tube in which the papers are pneumatically whisked to Mrs. Fryer's desk.

Papers and cash are returned to the customer the same way.

Branch manager William J. Fossat says the new system is much faster than the customary teller window transactions. He said the security factor is 100 per cent foolproof.

Mrs. Jarvis Re-Elected

Honorary president Mrs. John R. Nicholson and representatives from other hospital auxiliaries were among the guests at the annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Veteran's Hospital.

In her report, president Mrs. H. Jarvis said that four life memberships had been given during the year. The recipients were Mrs. P. Smoothy, Mrs. R. S. Standerwick, Mrs. F. R. Sehl and Mrs. T. Fulthorp.

Mrs. Jarvis also reported that during the year the auxiliary had recovered a chair in the lounge, purchased a tape recorder and a television set and kept up the bus used for transporting patients.

Reports were also given by Mrs. J. Lewis, library committee; Mrs. H. Murray, hospital visiting, and Mrs. A. Gosse, chapel committee.

The executive for the coming year includes Mrs. H. Jarvis, president; Mrs. B. B. Bowen, first vice-president; Mrs. S. C. Randall, second vice-president; Mrs. C. H. Willoughby, treasurer; Mrs. F. Roberts, recording secretary, and Mrs. C. L. Pullen, corresponding secretary.

DEAR ABBY . . . By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Stuffed Closet

DEAR ABBY: In the 25 years Tiny and I have been married, he has gained and lost the same 90 pounds at least five times.

Each time Tiny has a weight loss he is so proud, he treats himself to a new wardrobe. But he doesn't wear it long because he puts the weight back in no time.

He has two closets filled with practically brand-new suits to fit a 160-pounder, a 190-pounder, a 220-pounder, and right now he is wearing suits to fit a 250-pounder—because that's what he weighs!

When I tell him I want to give away some of those suits he's had hanging in his closet for 15 years, he blows his top. I think it's a crime to let perfectly goods suits hang there when somebody could get some use out of them. The same goes for shirts and shoes. What do you think?—Tiny's Wife

DEAR WIFE: I'm with you. Call the Goodwill Industries and let them pick up Tiny's outgrown wardrobes. Their resale shops put money back into the Goodwill organization whose policy it is to employ the handicapped, and teach them to recondition furniture, appliances, and clothing, thus becoming employable, self-respecting wage earners. Now if that isn't more important than hoarding clothes (that are going out of style anyway) I don't know what is!

DEAR ABBY: This to Faithful Reader who thinks he is possibly the oldest person ever to write to Dear Abby:

You say you will be 81 in September? Well, I was 91 in August, so stop your bragging, young fellow. I have written to Dear Abby several times over the years and listen to her on CBS radio nearly every morning.

Your story on how your mother discouraged unbidden guests reminded me of a similar experience. We had a beautiful cherry tree which bore delicious fruit. One day a city friend, learning of the cherries, exclaimed, "O, how wonderful! I am coming out to get some."

"Fine," said my wife. "We sell them to help pay off the mortgage."

The lady never came. Sincerely yours,—An M. D. In Washington, D.C.

DEAR M. D.: Thank you for your warm letter. I see by your signature that you are a doctor. You could make me give up eating apples.

DEAR ABBY: The other night my husband and I were invited to his mother's house for supper. My husband's brother and his wife were also invited and they were there when we arrived. My mother-in-law had the table set with her good china and silver.

Just as we were about to sit down, my sister-in-law got an emergency type telephone call, and she and her husband had to leave without eating.

All of a sudden the good dishes and silver disappeared, and on went the chipped, old everyday stuff!

I felt like I'd been slapped in the face. If you had been in my place, what would your feelings have been? Sign this . . .—Nobody

DEAR NOBODY: I'd probably have felt like disappearing with the good dishes and silver.

Learning Alphabet Gives Early Lead

LONDON — Children in Britain who are taught to read with the 44-letter initial teaching alphabet (I.T.A.) have an early lead, but not an assured final advantage, over children taught the traditional alphabet.

This is a conclusion in the first independent study evaluating the initial teaching alphabet after eight years of experiment and considerable controversy.

The report was commissioned by the Schools Council, a national curriculum study group sponsored by the Government.

The new alphabet, devised by Sir James Pitman, grandson of the inventor of the short-hand system, is completely phonetic. All words are spelled as they are pronounced. It has one letter for each sound and is now being used to teach children in about 2,000 of the 21,000 infant schools in Britain.

Local principals have the freedom to decide by which method their pupils will be taught to read.

The study on I.T.A. shows that using this method children learn to read faster, earlier, more easily and more happily than children using the traditional alphabet.

When the traditional alphabet is used, the survey said, the child is dependent on the teacher and frequently needs to consult her. When I.T.A. is used, it frequently results in the development of confidence and initiative in the child, with the teacher becoming less of an authoritarian figure.

It was the children's enjoyment in learning to read with the I.T.A. method that gave many teachers the greatest pleasure, the report said. A majority of teachers questioned for the survey used in the study stressed how using I.T.A. "cuts out frustrations (of children) and gives them a sense of achievement."

But the benefits do not necessarily last. According to the study, there is evidence that after about three years of schooling, the reading attainments of most children taught initially by the traditional alphabet, are approximately equal to those who learned by I.T.A.

Children from five to seven years old may learn I.T.A. in infant schools. Many of them then switch to reading by the traditional alphabet at the age of six. In some cases, slower pupils do not do this until the age of eight.

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice,

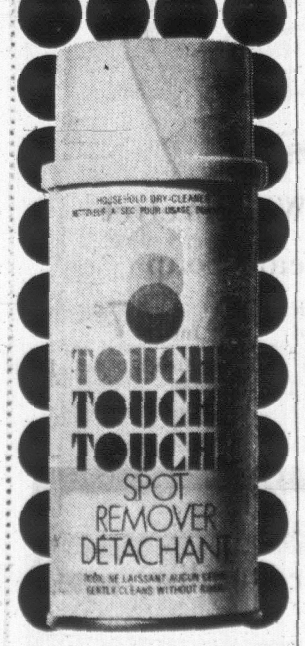

I have been teaching sewing in high school for more years than I care to remember and probably haven't kept up with the newest methods for handling the new fabrics. I still have my students stay-stitch their seams but now I find that when they do this on knits especially, the seams draw up. Do you feel that stay-stitching can be eliminated today?—Miss T. W.

Dear Miss T. W.:

When stitching on knits, stay-stitching should be eliminated because you aren't able to provide the "give" necessary. Seams should be pulled slightly when sewing with knits, this will give them the elasticity that goes along with the fabric, thus the stitches won't break when there is the least amount of strain on them.

I feel that stay-stitching is relatively unimportant if you teach your students to pin carefully and often; if you pin, the fabric won't stretch out of shape. The only place I have my students stay-stitch is the neckline because when they are working on one garment for any length of time, the neckline could become stretched before they have a chance to apply the facing.

You may find the answers to your questions on how to adjust a pattern for a better fit in Mrs. Farmer's booklet, "Your Pattern and You." In sending for this booklet, please enclose 25 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and mail to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

Wide Probe of Montreal Limousine Contract Asked by NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat MP Frank Howard said Tuesday any investigaton of the federal government's contract with the firm supplying limousine service at Montreal International Airport should include the question of political contributions.

It was reported Friday that Transport Minister Don Jamieson has ordered an investigation of the contract, which gives Murray Hill Limousine Sevice Ltd. exclusive rights to ferry passengers from the airport.

Mr. Howard, member for Skeena, said in his statement:

"Murray Hill made at least one donation to the Liberal party in the last federal election and I think Mr. Jamieson's inquiry should be broad enough to determine whether or not political contributions to the Liberals in any way was influential in Murray Hill getting the exclusive right to ground transportation at the Montreal airport.

"The fact that it was this exclusive position of Murray Hill that led to some of the destruction recently in Montreal is sufficient to demand a thoroughgoing inquiry both into the extent of Murray Hill's political contributions, the possible influence that those contributions may have had, and the total amounts received by all political parties.

"I'm sure my own party would be prepared to have its books scrutinized."

The downtown depot of Murray Hill was a centre of rioting a week ago during the police strike in Montreal, causing an estimated $300,000 damage.

Taxi drivers in the city have protested the exclusive airport ground transportation contract held by Murray Hill.

Two Bodies Found

LONDON (AP)—An old couple died Tuesday night in a fire believed to have started amid rubbish piled up during the strike of London garbage men. The bodies of Alex Konontof, 70, and his wife, Loukia, 65, were recovered from their home in the Marylebone district.

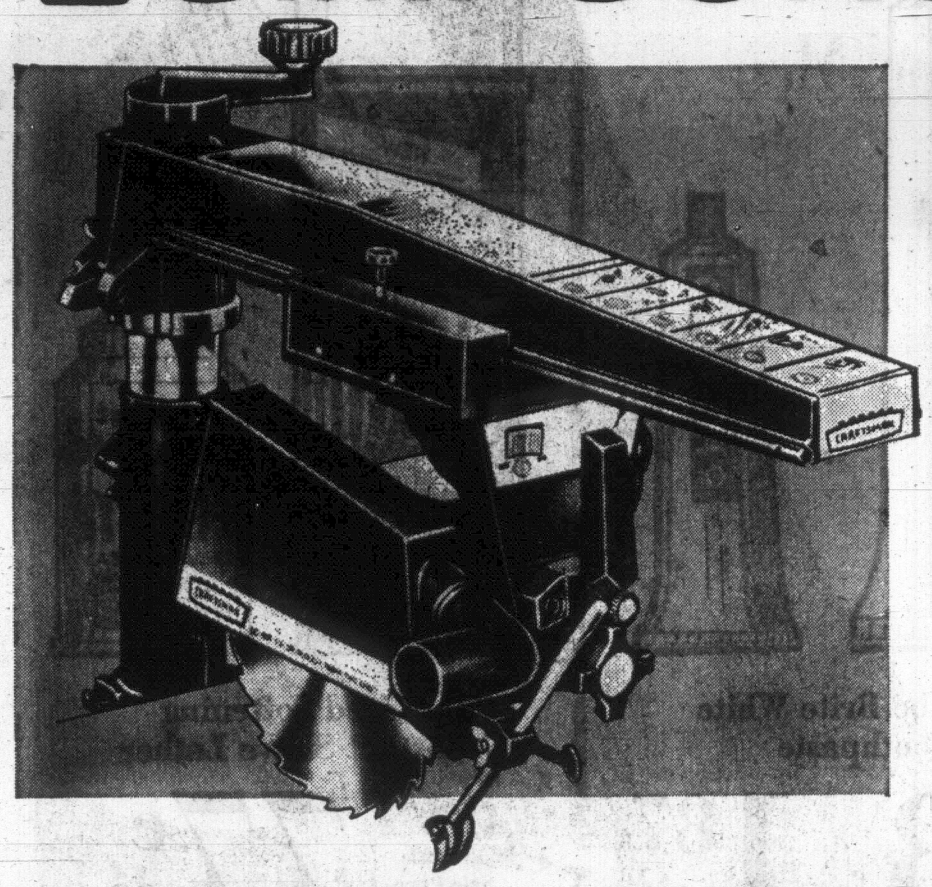

Damages Awarded

VANCOUVER (CP)—Johannes Gisbertus Verrer was awarded $21,649 in Supreme Court Tuesday for the loss of his wife in a car accident Sept. 28, 1967. Helen W. Watt was awarded $17,332 for back injuries received when struck by a car June 2, 1967.

Faith in North Pays Off for Airline

By KEN POLE

EDMONTON (CP) — Severe political airpockets and occasional heavy financial fog aren't conducive to a comfortable economic ride, but it's all part of running an airline for Maxwell W. Ward.

Wardair Canada Ltd., which began 20 years ago as a "one-man, one-plane" bush operation, now has jets for international charter and nine smaller aircraft for operations in northern Canada.

It has grown from a desk and filing cabinet in Yellowknife to a posh office on the 26th floor of Edmonton's largest building; from gross revenues of less than $300,000 in 1955 to more than $10,000,000 expected this year. In 1968, gross revenues were $9,600,000-plus.

Mr. Ward, the original pilot of that one-man Yellowknife operation, holds 80 per cent of the Wardair stock and is president and general manager.

The long hours, usually seven days a week, necessary to attain his present position seem to agree with Mr. Ward. He flourishes on work and at 46 is slim and youthful with a tanned, relatively unlined face.

BELIEVED IN NORTH

However, his hair is heavily streaked with white, a legacy of the long fight to get Wardair on the flight line to prosperity.

An RCA flying instructor during the Second World War, Mr. Ward headed north after his discharge and soon decided there was a bright future in Canadian northern flying.

He bought a small Fox Moth for $2,000 down and $715.16 a month for 15 months and used it to carry freight and passengers between isolated settlements. He charged 40 cents a mile.

Then financial troubles struck and Mr. Ward headed south for a sally into the house-building field at a time when it was expanding rapidly in Alberta. He made enough money to have another stab at commercial flying.

In 1952 he applied for a licence to operate Wardair as a charter service based in Yellowknife. This marked the start of a series of clashes between Mr. Ward and Canada's aviation authorities. His application was refused.

CAME LONG WAY

Mr. Ward fought the ruling and eventually the government relented and Wardair was airborne—well, almost. The company didn't have a plane until the Industrial Development Bank financed most of the $96,000 purchase price of a de Havilland Otter.

The northern fleet has come a long way since then. It now consists of four Bristol Freighters, each with a payload of six tons or 44 passengers; two de Havilland Twin Otters; two single-engined Otters and a leased twin-engined Piper Comanche.

In 1962 Mr. Ward decided there was a market for a charter operation capable of giving the established passenger lines a run for their money.

So he bought a DC-6B from CP Air, but Wardair lost $270,000 which cleaned out the cash assets and the plane went back.

Then Mr. Ward bought another DC-6B, this time from KLM of The Netherlands, with three years to pay. It was 1964 before it began to make money.

Two years later, a Boeing 727 was leased on a purchase basis. Before the $5,500,000 jet joined Wardair's fleet, total assets were about $1,000,000.

BANK HELPED AGAIN

About 18 months ago, the first 183-seat 302C model of the Boeing 707 was bought for $8,300,000. The IDB helped this time with $5,000,000.

A second 707 was purchased this year for the same price as the first one and the smaller 727 was leased to Braniff International Airlines, based in Florida.

The 707 introduction and the 727 lease gave Wardair a 25-per-cent increase in jet-seating capacity and at the same time rid the company of a plane which was providing low passenger seat-mile revenues.

In a recent financial statement, Mr. Ward said:

"Since June our revenue has been recovering nicely. . . . I am looking for a high return in 1970."

Wardair expects to have made 300 charter flights by the end of this year and anticipates more next year. Already, 230 transatlantic charter flights have been contracted for 1970.

Wardair's slice of the Canadian charter pie was 28 per cent last year, continuing a steady increase from the six per cent it had in 1962.

COMPETITION ROSE

Air Canada and CP Air, however, moved into the charter field in a big way this year and dropped their prices. But Mr. Ward feels their prices will probably go back up because the two airlines have higher operating costs than his company.

However, the increased competition took its toll. Wardair's profit for the first seven months of this year dropped to $123,038 from $246,073 in the same period last year.

Wardair's progress has had other setbacks. Last year the company had its charter licence suspended for breach of federal regulations governing charter flights.

The company admitted that it had, on five occasions, accepted passengers who were not qualified—who were not members of the chartering groups for at least six months as required by law.

ONUS TAKEN OFF

Claims that the infractions were caused by inexperienced personnel, that none of the persons involved actually went on the flights and that they were employees of major airlines—Wardair's competition—were ruled as having no bearing on the case.

Subsequently, the Canadian transport commission took the onus off airlines by ruling that persons flying on a charter must provide signed affidavits saying they have completed the required membership.

But the suspension hurt Wardair, and 1968 earnings dropped to $376,873 from $967,372.

Despite the drop in profit this year, Mr. Ward is still optimistic. Part of this year's drop, he says, was caused by high costs associated with the introduction of new aircraft earlier in the year.

Mingled with Mr. Ward's optimism is a tinge of sadness. He says the company's northern operation will be expanded and because of the efficiency of new aircraft, the last of the independent operators will be cut out. These men are the bush pilots who used to count Max Ward as one of their own special breed.

NEIGHBORS NUDE? BUILD HIGHER FENCE!

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — If nude neighbors annoy you, you should build a higher fence.

That's what sunbather James A. Kech told his neighbor Trey J. Morris recently, and Prosecutor Keith Serensen of San Mateo County agreed.

Refusing Morris's complaint Tuesday against Kech for outraging public decency, Serensen noted that the backyard fence between the two homes was difficult to see through or over.

"Nudity of itself is not against the law in your own back yard," Sorensen said.

Little Men In Space Suits Walk Badlands

EDMONTON (CP) — John Bird, movie maker, author and novelist, leaned back in his chair and said: "Sorry, I can't say much yet."

John and his brother, James, are the principals in a 40-minute science-fiction film about a trip into space.

"let's just say the film is about the essence of the universe . . . the fourth dimension . . . that area beyond Pluto."

The other unusual aspect of the film is the makers' ages: John is 14, James is 10.

John wrote a book on space flight and sent it to the United States National Aeronautic and Space Administration which updated it and directed John to industries involved with the U.S. space effort.

To get background material for his film, John went to see a space movie nine times, making notes and taking a tape recorder along.

"Production is under way," said John. "We have been to the Drumheller badlands region for location shooting."

The badlands, about 150 miles southeast of Edmonton, contain formations which approximate the appearance of lifeless planets.

In the movie, the boys wear quilted space suits and helmets made of glass fibre and papier mache, air packs and heating system made from a hair dryer.

They have built a re-entry vehicle and the family garage has been converted into sections of a space ship.

"We will have a five-man crew and one of them will be in suspended animation to conserve oxygen and food," John said, "One man uses 3,000 food calories a day and gets through about three pounds of air.

"He just can't do it on a flight involving fantastic light years. Suspended animation has to come."

Space law gives way to parental direction when the boys use a weightless simulator, which will suspend a crew member in a bicycle tire over a garage beam, with a rope counter-weighted by old car tires.

Audrey Bird said someone could get hurt with the contraption.

"I was in it for two hours," James said. "I'm an astronaut, tough and trained.

"I was able to read and write and perform various tests."

Their basement contains a mock-up of a planet surface and will be used for shooting scale models.

Project cameraman Kimball Day, 14, will also shoot detailed diagrams, pictures of astronauts and rocket models in John's bedroom.

The boys said they plan to show their film to friends and perhaps show it at a planetarium. They hope a television company or the National Film Board may be interested.

"Talk about being out of this world," said Mrs. Bird, whose husband is an investment company manager.

"I'm 238,957 miles away every day."

That's how far John says it is to the moon.

Hopes Still Harbored By Tibet's Dalai Lama

By T. JEFF WILLIAMS

DHARAMASALA, India (AP) — The Dalai Lama folded his arms across his brown-robed chest and considered the question about China's Mao Tse-tung.

"Mao Tse-tung is acting now according to his impulses. He acts like the ancient emperors. What he says is the law. What he is doing now is just what he opposed in the beginning."

In an interview with The Associated Press at his mountain-top home of exile here in northwest India, the Dalai Lama spoke of China's takeover of his country—Tibet—and his hopes for the future.

The Dalai Lama is not the retiring esthetic one might expect. His large and expressive eyes behind blue-tinted glasses watch every move of his guest. His voice is a rich baritone that can explode in laughter or rise sharply as emotions pour from him while he talks of the country he fled in 1959.

He once thought well of Mao.

"When I first met him I was impressed that he really had deep feelings for the people, for the poor people."

"But after the cultural revolution my attitude has changed. Now everything in China is in the hands of Mao and his wife. This is very bad. Unless . . ." he paused. "Unless they are being used . . ." He left the poised question unanswered but raised the possibility that Mao's power is steadily being usurped, possibly by his heir, Lin Piao, and the army.

In 1959 the Dalai Lama, then 24, fled through the icy passes of the Himalayas to safety in India, travelling for days by mule.

HOPES TO RETURN

Ten years after those harrowing days, he still hopes to return to an independent Tibet. He pins much of his hopes on the youths of Tibet, youths who now are reported to be fighting again with the Chinese military authorities controlling Tibet.

"These children are our hope. This is why we are struggling. We have the right to struggle. Our struggle has a practical purpose.

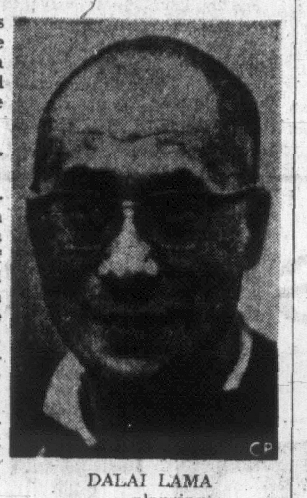

"Tibet can even be a Communist state if that's what the majority of the people want. It doesn't matter what they choose as long as it is what the Tibetans themselves want."

Asked what rebel activities were developing in Tibet, the Dalai Lama talked around a specific answer. But he said that organized rebel groups are difficult to sustain.

"We have no outside support," he added.

Although the Dalai Lama declined to discuss it, it is known that his top aides make trips into the remote principality of Mustang in northern Nepal where rebel Tibetan tribesmen have a base area. Strikes into Tibet by Khamba tribesmen, with Indian and American support, have been conducted for years.

The Dalai Lama made no attempt to speculate when it might be possible for him to return to his fabled country. But he is young, and he is patient.

VICTORIA'S DAILY NEWSPAPERS

More Efficient Colombo Plan Meetings Seen

Quicker, more efficient conferences for the Colombo Plan is the aim of a Canadian paper, accepted by delegates at the preparatory week of this year's conference in Victoria.

Working sessions, which continue today after opening Tuesday, are dealing with ways to cut out the first week of meetings, and with it, their part of the conference.

Secretary-General J. G. Hadwen said there are three alternatives to the preparatory week, when civil service experts edit and polish the 5,000-word reports from each of the 24-member countries.

One is to get the Colombo Plan bureau to do the work. Or the host country could do it or to choose a committee of two or three from member countries.

Hadwen said the objective is similar to that stated in the United Nations by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, who said there are too many speeches and long sessions.

The first session of the Colombo conference this year is a change from the past. There were only three short speeches Tuesday morning in a session that lasted less than an hour.

He said the final decision will have to be made by the ministers when they take over in the final week of the session, beginning Oct. 28.

Current meetings involve senior civil servants. Sessions beginning Monday will involve representatives at a higher level, mostly ambassadors, although two of them have already arrived for discussions.

While the delegations have broken down into committees of four nations each, there is an extra committee discussing reports from each nation on the special topic of administration for development.

The committee will put the reports together into one major report for the final two weeks' sessions on problems of administering aid.

The work of the preliminary groups now meeting, said Hadwen, is to sort out the main economic problems of each nation and put them into a single report for the ministerial level of the conference.

WATER PUZZLE

Problems of water pressure on Mount Tolmie left some members of Saanich public works committee puzzled Tuesday night.

E. D. Robbins, 3490 Mayfair Drive, said in a letter there have been three serious fires in recent years "without adequate water supply."

Municipal engineer Neville Life said there is adequate water for fire protection from reservoirs containing 20,000 gallons and 1,200,000 gallons on top of the hill.

But he said a pumper truck is needed for proper pressure for firefighting. Residential watermains were not designed to produce adequate pressure for firefighting direct from the main. This was only done in commercial areas.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said he still couldn't understand why firefighters were standing there with little water in their hoses.

The letter and the engineer's report were referred to the fire committee and Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland will be asked for a report.

STREET LIGHTS

Residents in Ten Mile Point in Saanich are being asked if they want street lights.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tuesday a letter from his office seeks an opinion on the subject.

He said requests have been received recently for street lights and the time had come to get general opinion.

Costs indicated would be probably less than $10 a year for 10 years. Choices for residents in the opinion sampling are yes or no, or yes on some major roads and problem areas.

Provincial Study On ETV Proposed

No quick answer on how to implement educational television can be found in the light of long-range educational changes, the Greater Victoria school board was told Tuesday.

Dr. John Wiens, the board's director of instruction, said when considering possible uses of ETV, the board should take into consideration the possibility that in future students will spend less time in school.

He said ETV should be implemented at the provincial or federal level.

•

"I don't think any one district can embark on it by itself."

Education Minister Donald Brothers will travel to Ottawa later this week for a conference of provincial education ministers and Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier to discuss ETV.

Brothers earlier said a policy statement on ETV can be expected by the end of 1969.

Dennis Brown, the Greater Victoria board's supervisor of curriculum and special services, recently made a study of ETV in Ontario and the Maritimes.

•

He stressed the need for the board to clarify objectives when considering the idea.

Trustee Allan McKinnon said television, among other alternatives, can be used as a teaching tool, as curriculum ehrichment and as an infomation retrieval system.

"I really think the problem is so big that our committee should press for a study on a provincial level."

ROADS PROGRAM

Saanich public works committee ticked off a priority list of major 1970 road construction projects Tuesday night.

It recommended to the next council meeting that design work start on projects totalling $698,000.

The entire road construction budget of the municipality for 1969, excluding McKenzie Avenue, was $600,000.

Authority to proceed with design work will enable the engineering department to clear the decks before work starts. Approval of all projects will be made by the 1970 council.

The recommended list for design work includes:

Four lanes, curbs, sidewalks and drains, Carey Road, complete Seaton to Glanford, $70,000;

Gorge Road, Tillicum to Dysart, $59,000;

Quadra Street, Nicholson to Rogers, $91,000;

Gordon Head Road, Cedar Hill Cross Road to McKenzie, three lanes, one sidewalk, $59,000;

Cedar Hill Cross Road, Shelbourne to Synod, $115,000;

Carey Road, Douglas to Seaton, $150,000;

Inverness Road, Glasgow to Quadra, $16,000.

Two-lane reconstruction for Interurban Road, North Road to Alan, $100,000, and Glanford Avenue, Carey to McKenzie, $38,000.

FOREIGN POLICY

J. G. Hadwen, secretary-general of the Colombo Plan conference in Victoria, will speak at the University of Victoria student union building Thursday.

He'll be discussing Canadian foreign policy in the Pacific and will answer questions.

Hadwen is Canada's ambassador to Burma and high commissioner to Malaysia and Singapore.

The lecture starts at 12:30 p.m. It was arranged by the university's political science faculty and the student forum.

Color TV Radiation Level Legislation Being Drawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government plans to propose standards allowing emission of radiation from color television sets at a level five times higher than recommended by government scientists, it was learned today.

Language in the proposal, signed by Chris A. Hansen, commissioner of the environmental control administration, describes it as the lowest standard now practical, but promises possible reductions in the future.

The new rules, first to seek limits on x-ray radiation from television sets, are scheduled to be published Thursday in the Federal Register. They would not become legally enforceable until a second publication at least 30 days later.

The proposed standards jibe with those suggested to the department of health, education and welfare by a technical committee which had received recommendations from government scientists.

AFTER X-RAYS FOUND

They result from a law enacted last year following disclosures of erratic and sometimes high emission of x-rays from color TV sets.

Government scientists have told Congress there is no evidence to direct harm to humans from radiation emitted by color television sets.

But they also said that radiation accumulates in the body so any exposure brings a person closer to the unknown point where genes are mutated, possibly causing damage to future generations.

Under the proposed standards, color television sets manufactured after next Jan. 1 may not emit radiation at more than .5 milliroentgens an hour measured within two inches of a color set operated on a 130-volt electric line.

Cassius Signed For Broadway Job

NEW YORK (AP) — A Broadway producer says he has signed Cassius Clay, the undefeated but unfrocked world heavyweight boxing champion, to become a song and dance man during the next theatrical season.

The producer, Zev Bufman, said Monday that Clay—who took the name Muhammad Ali when he joined the Black Muslims—would star in a musical version of Big Time Buck White opening Dec. 1 at the George Abbott Theatre.

Bufman said the contract guarantees the boxer two weeks off during the run of the show for a title bout if one materializes.

Clay could not be reached for comment.

Big Time Buck White originally was a play about Negro aspirations and the uses of black power. Written by Joseph Dolan Tucci, it ran for 129 performances in an off-Broadway theatre during the 1968 season.

The play has been reworked into a musical with songs by Oscar Brown Jr.

Bufman said his boxer star, who is 27, would play the title role in the musical version, singing four songs.

The World Boxing Association withdrew its recognition of Clay as champion in 1967 because of his refusal to be inducted into the army. He is free on $5,000 bail pending an appeal of a five-year sentence on a draft violation charge.

Nashville's Big Show Celebrating

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Grand Ole Opry, which provided Johnny Cash, Roy Acuff, Eddy Arnold and a lot of others with their springboard to fame on radio, is celebrating its 44th birthday this week.

In town to pay homage are something like 6,000 believers from around the world.

Actually, the birthday won't be until more than a month from now, but they're having the doings in October because a lot of the top names have heavy bookings when the busy season starts in November.

The celebration is part disc jockey convention and part country music festival.

Transplant Patient Dies

DURBAN (AP) — South Africa's seventh heart transplant patient died early today, 29 hours after the operation on him was completed at Wentworth Hospital.

The patient, a 44-year-old welder named D. J. Stoltz, was given the heart of a 20-year-old football star, Ian Player, who was fatally injured in an auto accident last Thursday.

With his death, only two of South Africa's seven transplant recipients survive. Both are patients of Dr. Christiaan Barnard in Cape Town, and both are recovering in hospital after suffering setbacks a few weeks ago.

Sinatra Arrest Ordered

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — An arrest warrant has been issued for Frank Sinatra, who failed to heed a subpoena to an investigation on organized crime. An aide to Sinatra said he was out of the country.

The warrant, enforceable only in New Jersey, was issued Tuesday at the request of the state investigation commission.

In Beverly Hills, Calif., a spokesman for the singer-actor said Tuesday: "Mr. Sinatra left New York City this morning for the Caribbean and at present is unaware of the situation. We are trying to locate him now and I am certain that when he is advised of the matter he will have some comment."

The commission said Sinatra had been served with a subpoena June 25 in connection with an investigation of organized crime throughout the state. At that time, Sinatra was aboard his yacht off Highlands, N.J.

OBTAINED DELAY

He was ordered to appear at a private hearing Aug. 19, but his Los Angeles lawyer, Milton Rudin, obtained a month's delay.

The commission said it had not heard from Rudin or Sinatra since, and Superior Court Judge Frank J. Kingfield issued the warrant, charging the entertainer with contempt.

If convicted, he would face up to six months in jail.

Sinatra is a native of Hoboken and has frequently visited the state.

He was forced to sell his interests—he said they were worth $3,500,000—in two Nevada resorts in 1963, when state officials charged he had been host to a Chicago underworld figure.

'Violence Not Needed For Change'

TORONTO (CP) — The head of the Toronto branch of the Company of Young Canadians said Tuesday night he opposes the use of violence in achieving social change.

Richard Lightbown, 29, said company members sometimes become involved in confrontations with the establishment because they are seeking social change.

"But I don't think anyone in this area would use or has any intention of using guns or Molotov cocktails to achieve change," he said in an interview. "It makes no sense to pursue change by violence here when there are lots of other means."

Mr. Lightbown said he knew of no investigation of company members here such as the one under way in Montreal by the RCMP.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said Tuesday that the "shady activities" of some Montreal company members are being examined."

Mr. Lightbown, a graduate of the University of Toronto school of social work, said his budget for the 23-member Toronto branch is about $145,000 annually.

IQ Potential Loss in Negro Said Possible

NEW YORK (AP)—A Nobel laureate from Stanford University has renewed his call for "a serious scientific study" of whether Negroes are genetically interior to whites in their potential for intelligence.

The scientist, Dr. William Shockley, said he believes that from facts now available it will be possible to prove that there has been "a loss of ground for Negro genetic potential for intelligence" during the last 30 years.

He said such a loss would be shown to be an unforeseen by-product of the encouragement given by welfare programs to "the least effective elements of our population" to have large families.

Shockley, a professor of engineering science at Stanford, shared the Nobel Prize for physics with two other men in 1956 for the development of the transistor. His views are similar to a hypothesis put forth earlier this year by Dr. Arthur R. Jensen, an educational psychologist at the University of California at Berkeley.

Study Provoked Storm of Protest

Jensen's study appeared in the Harvard Educational Review and provoked a storm of criticism. The review made space available in the succeeding issue for responses from other scientists.

"My position," Shockley says, "is not that all Negroes are inferior to all whites; instead I do believe that many Negroes are superior to many whites. In fact, my statistical studies show that American Negroes achieve almost every eminent distinction that whites achieve and are about 50 per cent more successful per capita in winning Olympic medals.

"However, as far as distinction dependent upon mental powers is concerned, the probability on a per capita basis is between 10 and 100 times smaller for Negroes than for the national average and it is this probability that I fear is falling as a result of the high birth rate of the most disadvantaged. . . .

"I propose a serious scientific effort to establish by how much the distribution of hereditary potential for intelligence of our black citizens falls below whites."

"An objective examination of relevant data leads me inescapably to the opinion that the major deficit in Negro intellectual performance must be primarily of hereditary origin and thus relatively irremediable by practical improvements in environment."

Lodge Staying

PARIS (AP) — Henry Cabot Lodge, chief U.S. negotiator at the Vietnam peace talks, has denied rumors that President Nixon plans to replace him. Returning Tuesday from talks with Nixon in Washington, Lodge said he had reported on the peace conference and received "instructions for the future."

STANDARD PLAN REVERSED

Triangle Hospital Planned

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Newfoundland government has accepted a design for a triangular hospital building that overcomes health-plan restrictions on paying the full cost of private rooms for patients.

The 135-bed, six-storey building, designed by the St. John's architectural firm of Horwood, Campbell and Guihan, is planned as a regional institution serving a population of between 30,000 and 40,000.

The magazine Canadian Hospital says the design has received "100 per cent acceptance" by the provincial government.

Dr. Leonard Miller, deputy health minister and George Warren, deputy minister of public works, both declined to say where and when such a hospital would be built.

Because of its width and three-cornered layout, beds can be located up to 20 feet apart and a movable partition from window to door gives each patient a private room.

Each two-bed ward is laid out as a double triangle, the movable partition forming a common base. The folding partition would allow it to be classified under medical care plans as a semi-private room.

The design is based on height rather than width and length, thus reversing standard hospital plans where all rooms are on a long corridor.

This also cuts down walking distances for nurses, a time-wasting problem faced by many big hospitals.

The architects suggest another way to make nurses' work easier would be glass partitions on corridor walls, allowing constant observation of patients.

Health department staff under Dr. Miller were involved with the architects in planning. A mock-up of one room was subjected to critical appraisal of administrators, doctors, nurses and other hospital personnel.

There has been no official estimate of cost, but Canadian Hospital says it would run between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

This is regarded by hospital officials as reasonable for an institution of this size.

The floor-to-bed ratio would be about 640 square feet per bed, compared to varying figures across Nort America of between 100 and 700 square feet.

Underwater English Training Proposed

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Heli-speech, a form of underwater English, may be the answer to one communications problem faced by squeaky-voiced divers working deep under the water's surface.

Dr. Carl L. Thompson of Louisiana State University, a specialist in ear, nose and throat research, said the new language might be imposed on divers by their exotic breathing gases.

At depths below 200 feet, professional divers breathe a mixture of helium and oxygen to avoid dangerous side effects caused by the nitrogen in normal air when breathed under high pressure.

The helium has a side effect of its own. It shortens the diver's vocal cords, making them talk in a high-pitched squeak known as "the Donald Duck effect."

"I think developing a special form of English for helium speech might be the answer to many problems," Thompson said.

He suggested that heli-speech could be taught in classes much as foreign languages are.

"You can learn Spanish and you can learn German," he said. "I don't see why you can't learn helium speech."

Centennial Committees Announced

Formation of 22 new centennial '71 committees, three of them on the island, was announced Tuesday by L. J. Wallace, general chairman of the committee established to plan the celebration of B.C.'s 100th year in Confederation.

On Salt Spring Island, a committee has been formed under chairman F. Anderson.

In Qualicum Beach, the chairman is W. G. Penman, and in Ucluelet it's Mrs. M. Saxton.

The new committees bring to 34 the total number now working in the province, 15 in non-municipal and 19 in municipalities.

Wallace said he anticipates about 300 local committees will be formed.

"These community groups play a most important part in bringing the celebrations into the lives of all the people," Wallace said.

Fad for Nazi Regalia Booming

LONDON (Reuters) — London hippies are often loaded down with more Nazi regalia than even the most devout of Hitler's generals would have worn on ceremonial parade.

★ ★ ★

Long-haired youths festoon leather jackets or grubby shirts with Nazi emblems, wear German army belts and ride motorcycles with their flowing hair tucked beneath German army helmets.

And locked away in many glass cabinets throughout Britain, more-serious collectors have their own mementoes of the notorious Third Reich.

It is all part of a growing fad for Nazi regalia which is causing auctioneers of military odds and ends to rub their hands at booming profits.

A spokesman for the international auction firm of Sotheby's said: "It's not just German regalia—which we don't handle actually—that is selling well. We have had a fantastic demand for the older stuff as well—the old flintlock muskets and pistols of a couple of centuries ago."

Another London firm reports demand is also rising rapidly—along with prices—for old sets of toy lead soldiers, long since replaced by modern plastic varieties.

Breakdown, Sole Grounds

LONDON (Reuters) — A bill which makes breakdown of marriage the sole grounds for divorce cleared a major hurdle when it received the approval of the House of Lords.

The bill, dubbed by its critics as "Casanova's charter" now goes back to the House of Commons for final consideration.

By making the irretrievable breakdown of marriage the sole ground for divorce, the bill ends the existing practice of having to prove a marital offence—adultery, cruelty or desertion.

The most controversial clauses of the new bill would allow couples to divorce after two years' separation if both partners agree, and after five years' separation if one partner objects.

Economic Decentralization New Peking Bid

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG (WP) — Peking has called for the dispersal of Communist China's industries as a defence measure against the possibility of war.

An article in the latest issue of the authoritative Chinese journal "Red Flag," transmitted here Tuesday by Peking Radio, appealed for the "strategic redeployment" of factories in order to achieve a balance between "economic and defence needs."

•

The purpose of the measure, the article stressed, is to create "reliable industrial bases" throughout the country, thereby increasing China's "manoeuvorability" in the event of an attack by either the United States or the Soviet Union.

"Each locality could conduct the war autonomously, wipe out the enemy and win the conflict," the article said.

The "Red Flag" article, written by the "revolutionary committee" in charge of the Chinese capital, is considered by analysts here to be Peking's first nationwide appeal in an economic decentralization campaign that has been going on at provincial levels for several months.

One of the major objectives of the campaign, these analysts point out, has been to strengthen the self-sufficiency of China's regions.

This program is consistent with Communist Leader Mao Tse-tung's theory that China's best defence in case of attack is to wage a "people's war" rather than attempt to fight a conventional conflict against an enemy superior in firepower.

•

Mao's notion of a "people's war" is essentially to draw an invading army into the depths of China and then, as he has put it, "drown" the foe in an "ocean of humanity."

At the same time, the economic dispersal effort seems to betray Peking's apprehension that Chinese industry, much of it concentrated in coastal cities and areas like Manchuria, is extremely vulnerable to attack.

•

The fear of a Russian strike against their nuclear and advanced weapons development centres apparently prompted the Chinese to agree last week to open negotiations with Moscow aimed at cooling off the Sino-Soviet border dispute.

Tuesday's "Red Flag" article suggests, however, that the Peking leaders are doubtful that the border talks will succeed in reducing the Soviet threat more than temporarily.

While the article gave no specific details on the decentralization drive, evidence that the program is proceeding intensively has been reflected lately in a variety of reliable reports made available here.

•

According to reports from Southern Kwangtung province adjacent to Hong Kong, entire factories are being moved from the city of Canton into rural areas or split into smaller units and transferred to inland towns.

8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends and relatives who gave their kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offer*ings during the illness and death of* our beloved mother, Mrs. Winifred Abbott. Also to Drs. Lockyer and Krayenoff, nurses and staff of 2nd Central, Royal Jubilee Hospital, and Pastor Hawkes for his comforting words.—The Family.

On the occasion of our 50th Wedding Anniversary we wish to thank all our friends for the beautiful floral decorations, the many presents, cards and telegrams of congratulations.—Mr. and Mrs. P. Playne.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BARRETT—In loving memory of our beloved daughter, Bonnie Louise, who passed away on Oct. 15, 1960.

"To hear her voice, to see her smile.
To sit with her and talk awhile.
To be together in the same old way.
Would be our dearest wish today.
Only a cluster of memories,
Sprayed with a million tears,
Wishing God had spared you
Just a few more years.
—Remembered always, and never forgotten, by Mom, Dad and sister Sharon.

BARRETT—In loving memory of our beloved granddaughter, Bonnie Louise, who passed away on Oct. 15, 1960.

"Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all.
And though the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance, dear, of you."
—Always remembered by Granny and Grandpa Heaslip.

COONEY—In loving memory of Mrs. Gloria Cooney, who passed away October 15, 1968.

Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother,
It is sweet to breathe thy name;
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
—Always remembered by your daughter, Dorothy and family.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is Duel in the Sun, 7:30, on Channel 8, midnight on Channel 6. Starring Jennifer Jones, Gregory Peck, Joseph Cotten, Lionel Barrymore, Walter Huston and Lillian Gish, it's a big, sprawling western epic romance. Based on the Nevil Shute novel about the adventures of a half-breed Indian girl, it has lots of scope to satisfy anyone. Acting performances are excellent. Duel in the Sun was filmed in 1946.

★ ★ ★

THE NATURE OF THINGS, 8:30, Channels 2, 6. Old roots of a modern problem are traced in this examination of air pollution by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation public affairs program department. Pollution factors are traced from the use of coal in the 14th century to the present.

★ ★ ★

GLEN CAMPBELL HOUR, 7:30, Channel 7. Mostly a singers' show from Don Ho to Cher, without her Sonny. Campbell starts off with "More" and "Somewhere;" gives Cliff Arquette a chance to read letters from Mount Idy; hands Cher the stage for a song with the dancers and a duet with him to "Bang Bang." Another bit of comedy relief finds Carlos Montoya repairing Campbell's guitar, and we're back for the vocals with Don Ho singing his old reliables, "Tiny Bubbles" and "Ain't No Big Thing," and joining the cast for "Aquarius," Casey Anderson rounds out the guest list singing "In the Ghetto" among others.

★ ★ ★

ROOM 222. 8:30, Channel 4. "Flu." Pretty good episode about Principal Kaufman's battle keeping classes going with a flu-struck teaching staff. With Pete Dixon and Liz McIntyre among the stalwarts, to say nothing about Kaufman himself and student teacher Alice, classes are covered, if barely. But the beleaguered school gets a real shot in the arm from a Peace Corps volunteer back from Uganda, a young man whose father (Principal Kaufman) seems to underestimate him.

★ ★ ★

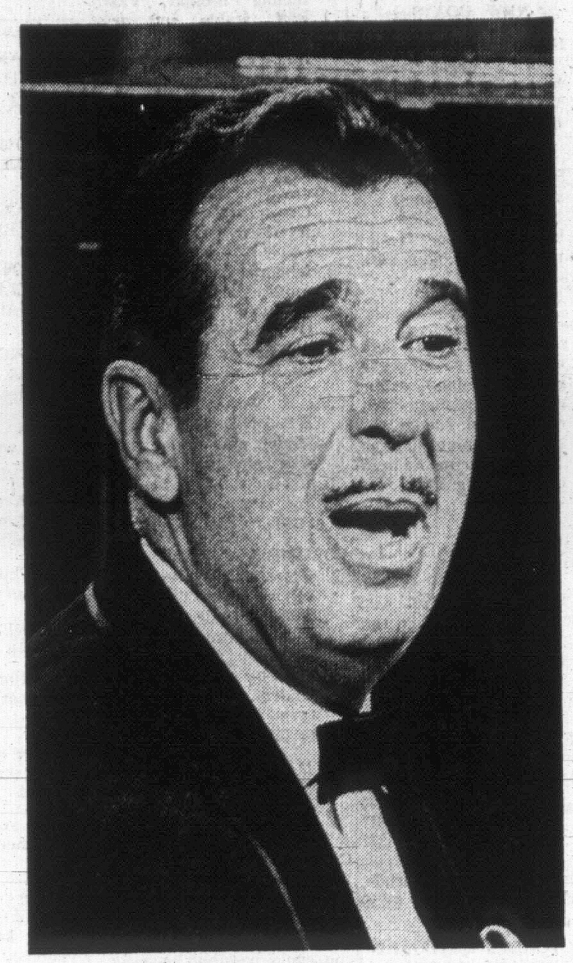

MEDICAL CENTRE, 9, Chanels 7, 12. "A Life Is Waiting." Thanks to the appeal of actress Barbara Rush and the determined character of young Doc Joe Gannon, this show is a notch above soap opera. Miss Rush is most appealing as a lady with a heart problem who is about to have her first baby, and requires an operation which may endanger both her life and the baby's. To add to the conflict, her husband doesn't want the child and has several run-ins with fighting Doc Gannon. Joe picks battles every Wednesday, and he figures to win 24 straight despite his youth.

★ ★ ★

MUSIC HALL. 9, Channel 5. Live from the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, Tennessee, Tennessee Ernie Ford hosts the third annual Country Music Association Awards ceremonies tonight. Performers and presenters of awards to the winners in each of the 11 categories (entertainer of the year, single record of the year, album of the year, Hall of Fame male vocalist, female vocalist, vocal group, instrumental group, instrumentalist, comedian, and song of the year), include such country stars as Johnny Cash, Charley Pride, Chet Atkins, Roy Clark, Merle Haggard, etc., etc., etc.

★ ★ ★

HAWAII FIVE-O, 10, Channels 7, 12. Entertaining action hour. McGarrett wants to break up a narcotics ring, and seeks support from a tourist who has a night on the town and becomes they key witness. After the tourist folds under pressure, McGarrett turns to policewoman Anne Helm for the icebreaker, and Miss Helm will stimulate your interest. Anne played a sexy-B girl last season and was a standout. She should be around more often.

TENNESSEE ERNIE FORD
Music Hall host, 9 on Channel 5

WEDNESDAY NIGHT MOVIE, 8, Channel 4. "Divorce American Style." (1967). Dick Van Dyke, Debbie Reynolds, Jason Robards and Jean Simmons star in one of the very few deft satires produced by the American film industry in recent years. A stylish script by producer Norman Lear casts a perceptive and jaundiced eye on the American institution of marriage in suburbia. Dick and Debbie are splitting up after many years and friend Robards, divorced from Jean Simmons, comes up with a far-fetched scheme to fix everything. Director Bud Yorkin gets good performances from all concerned.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

Crux Refused Further Delay In Hearing

NASSAU, Bahamas (CP) — Lawyer-financier A. G. Duncan Crux told a Nassau court Tuesday that he was still without vital documents he needs for his defence against a Canadian federal government bid to extradite him on 21 fraud and theft charges.

Despite a plea from Crux for a further adjournment, Magistrate John Baily ordered the hearing to continue. Crux had been given a one-week adjournment last Tuesday to get the documents, described as company papers, from Vancouver.

Crux told the court today that he had sent a request to Vancouver by express mail for the documents but because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday in Canada Monday had had no reply.

"I cannot do anything, your worship; it is a physical impossibility to present my evidence," Crux told the court.

10 CHARGES

Crux also appealed to be allowed to give evidence in his own behalf without having to undergo cross-examination by Bahamas Senator Kendal Isaacs of Nassau, who is representing Canada. This request also was refused.

The documents which Crux says he needs from Canada are in connection with evidence presented by the prosecution on a bulky set of depositions concerning 10 charges of publishing false prospectuses of Diversified Income Securities Ltd., a mutual fund management firm of which Crux was president and director.

The prosecution continued to present evidence intended to prove the depositions false.

Fair Opens

HONG KONG (Reuters) — A record amount of goods went on display at China's fall trade fair which opened in Canton today, the Hong Kong Communist newspaper New Evening Post reported. Several thousand foreign businessmen and Chinese from outside China attended the opening ceremony of the fair, China's main commercial contact with the outside world.

Barber Keeps Getting in Hair Of Aldermen

By JOHN DRISCOLL

Barber Paul Goodman appears ahead by a whisker in his 10-year zoning battle with city council.

Eight times Goodman has gone to city hall to ask for rezoning of a small parcel of land at 1757 Fort, from residential to commerical.

He kept telling council he wanted to build a barber shop which his father and he would operate.

Eight times he was refused rezoning because the city wanted a more comprehensive development of the area.

BUILT HOUSE

Then in January the persistent Goodman found out he could build a house and operate a barbershop in it provided he lived there, without any zoning changes. So he did.

before council to ask for rezoning explaining that under the home occupancy bylaw, he could not bring his father into the barber shop with him.

He admitted that he knew this before he built his house but that "after 10 years of trying, you grasp at any straw."

Council turned him down but Goodman asked for a review of the application and Tuesday appeared before the community development committee.

"I've got commercial properties all around me," said Goodman.

"But I can't even have a barber pole."

Goodman also wanted a commercial zoning because "it's our right to try to better ourselves."

Mayor Hugh Stephen pointed out that if commercial rezoning were given to all who wanted to better their position for resale, "the result would be chaos.

"Everybody would want their property zoned commercial," Stephen said.

The committee refused Goodman's ninth application for rezoning but did recommend that he go to the zoining board of variance.

The board has the power to relax the home occupancy bylaw so that two people can operate a business in one residence.

And there are signs that some council members are beginning to see Goodman's side of the argument.

NOTHING GAINED

Ald. Ian Stewart recommended that rezoning be permitted.

"The city wanted to see a comprehensive development in that area and it hasn't happened," he said.

"The only power we've had is to hold the zoning as residential. But nothing has happened and there's nothing to be gained by holding the zoning."

Ald. Harold Olafson pointed out that if Goodman's application was approved, we would have to approve rezoning for every 50-foot lot along the street."

Alberta Eyes Cable TV Distribution

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission heard Tuesday from both sides in the current debate over the importation of United States TV programs for distribution by cable in Canada, but indicated there will be no quick decision on the matter.

The CRTC — successor to the Board of Broadcast Governors —invited applications and presentations from various cable and broadcasting interests at the opening of a four-day hearing.

Strongest opposition to microwave usage and wide cable distribution came from the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, an affiliation of 299 private radio stations and 65 TV stations.

ONE RELAY

A. R. Crepault of Montreal, president of the association, urged the commission to limit the use of microwave to one relay—roughly 100 miles—north of the border.

He also called for a strict limitation of the number of channels carried on cable systems in Canada to six.

These measures were necessary, he said, if the CRTC is to ensure compliance with a section of the Broadcasting Act that calls for broadcasting to strengthen the cultural and political ties of the country.

OPINIONS VARY

Crepault said there are divisions within the CAB over the microwave issue but all members agreed the CRTC's major concern must be to prevent any alterations in the broadcasting field that make it more difficult to implement the Broadcasting Act.

For example, he said, beer and wine commercials carried on U.S. channels and shown in areas of Canada served by cable do not follow the same regulations as those set out for Canadian channels.

Many companies in Canada were subsidiaries of U.S. firms and could rely on ads placed on U.S. stations by the parent firm since they "know it will be received by their Canadian companies through cable pickups."

Further importation of U.S. programming would thus greatly reduce the advertising revenues of small Canadian stations, possibly forcing them out of business.

UNJUST

Ranged against these arguments was a brief by the Canadian Cable Television Association, which said it has never been shown that wider channel selection made possible by cable hurts existing broadcasting interests.

Ray Reierson, Alberta telephones minister, told the commission it is unjust to tolerate a situation where U.S. programs are available only to those in large centres close to the border where signals can be picked up by cable.

"Everyone should have the same right as those close to the border," he said.

Reierson said the Alberta government already has microwave facilities which could be adapted easily to carry TV signals to cable operators in all 10 cities in the province.

WHOLESALE COSTS

The government was preparing a submission to the CRTC to establish a centralized microwave service which would be presented in the near future.

Under this plan, the initial additional wholesale cost to cable operators for a three-channel service would be about 60 cents a household in Calgary and Edmonton, and $1 or less a household in the other cities.

CRTC Chairman Pierre Juneau told Reierson the commission is still wrestling with the over-all question of microwave and will neither make a snap decision nor consider the allocation of licences.

Broadleaved Misunderstanding

By HILDA BEASTALL

The most useful group of shrubs for this part of the Island is probably the least understood by the majority of gardeners. This refers to the broadleaf evergreen shrubs, so desirable and important for gardens with mild damp winters and moderately warm temperatures in summer.

Hilda

The fact of our often completely dry early summers can be successfully dealt with, so far, by artificial watering. The reputation of lack of hardiness levelled at some broadleaved evergreen shrubs becomes better understood after each winter when we suffer hard frosts.

It is proven that most damage results when shrubs have been subjected to rich soils and too much artificial watering after July.

Since the majority of these shrubs bloom in April, May and June, the growth also gets its start during these months. With the onset of our dry season usually at this time, these are the months when artificial watering must be used, but it is important to the health of the shrubs that the needs of each be understood.

Choisya ternata, the so-called Mexican-orange, is an easy broadleaved evergreen shrub to grow once we understand its needs. The aromatic, yellowish green foliage and fragrant clusters of white blossoms in April make the plant desirable, plus its slow growth to six or eight feet in height and spread.

This is an evergreen for full sun, well drained soil and no artificial watering once it is established in the garden. It will pick up all it needs from the soil surrounding it, like the brooms, cistuses, lavenders and many other fragrant leaved plants.

Grown in shade with other plants which need ample water all summer, choisya makes much lush growth which may collapse suddenly. The yellowing and collapse may come in late summer, posing a problem hard to solve.

This seems strange at first thought, since this shrub has proved hardy enough to frosts when grown in dry soils sheltered from northeast winds.

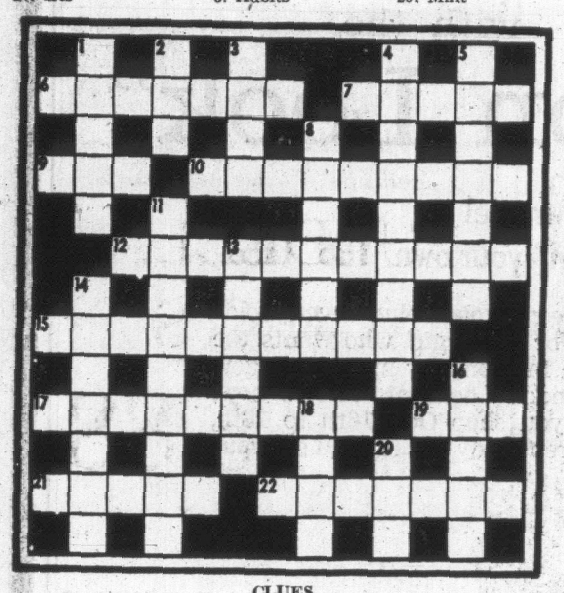

Only with help from gardeners in other areas are we able to arrive at an apparent solution to our more intricate problems.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Everyone Claimed State of New York

By BOB BOWMAN

The State of New York once belonged to Canada, but unfortunately the people who lived there did not know much about it. In fact they had already been claimed by the Dutch and British.

The Marquis de Tracy was sent to Quebec in 1665 with the famous Carignan-Salieres Regiment with instructions to get the Iroquois under control.

Actually Governor Courcelles tried to get ahead of Tracy by taking the troops into New York during the winter and they would have perished if it had not been for experienced Canadians who went with them.

Tracy moved far more carefully. During the summer of 1666 he had his troops train in the woods so they would know how to cope with Indian warfare and he did not begin the invasion of Iroquois territory until September.

He had built a chain of forts along the Richelieu River to protect the route. Nevertheless it was a tough march through the autumn woods, with streams and rivers swollen by rain.

Tracy was nearly drowned when he was being carried across a river on the back of a man who slipped and they fell into fast-moving water

However the force of 1,300 men eventually got to the Iroquois settlements and destroyed them. The Iroquois did not try to fight the well-trained French troops knowing that resistance would be useless.

They preferred to bide their time and wait for another day.

On Oct. 15, 1666, Tracy raised a huge cross bearing the lilies of France and proclaimed the territory to be part of Canada.

It had recently been obtained from Holland by the English and named New York. However, there were great celebrations in Quebec when Tracy and the troops returned.

There was a formal ball, the first ever held in Canada, but this disturbed the Jesuits who believed dancing to be sinful and prayed that it wouldn't happen again.

The Iroquois were impressed by French military might and signed peace treaties that were effective for a while. Many of the officers and men of the Carignan-Salieres remained in Canada and a number of communities in Quebec are named after them.

Other events on Oct. 15:

1612 — Champlain was made lieutenant-governor of Canada.

1700 — Company of Canada given exclusive rights to fur trade.

1851 — Lady Elgin turned first sod for Northern Railway.

1872 — Company organized to build trans-continental railway.

1874 — Warrant issued for arrest of Louis Riel.

1884 — First issue of La Presse, Montreal.

1885 — Fraser Institute, free public library, opened at Montreal.

1920 — Frank Ellis and Hector Dougall began bush pilot service from Winnipeg.

YOUR HEALTH

Several Types Of Hernias Known

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Hernia is the technical term for a rupture. Ruptures can take place in several places in the body, usually where some bit of stomach or bowel goes through some part of the wall of the abdomen. If a normally small hole is too big, a bit of bowel may slip by.

In men, the commonest hernia forms when a bit of bowel goes through a hole in the abdominal wall at the inner end of the groin — a hole needed for the passage of one of the spermatic cords which carry spermatozoa up from the testes to a little sac near the outlet of the urinary bladder.

Normally this hole in the abdominal wall is small and the bowel cannot get through, because the spermatic cord runs some distance through a channel that lies between two layers of muscle that overlap, as in the front of a double-breasted coat.

In some families, two or three brothers, may be born with very poor overlapping of the muscles, and a big hole in the abdominal wall, and for all their days they may be threatened with a rupture.

Perhaps one member of such a brotherhood will eventually have to be operated on for a rupture. To help him, the surgeon will make the muscles overlap and between the two layers he will leave a channel for the spermatic tube.

ALONGSIDE ARTERY

In women, the rupture in the groin comes out alongside the big artery which runs through the lower abdomen and down into the thigh. Some children are born with a ruptured navel, and many people have a hiatus hernia, or little rupture alongside the gullet where it runs through the diaphragm, or midriff, down to join with the stomach. Usually this hernia causes so few symptoms that it need not be operated on.

Quite a few people have a hernia through an operative wound. Commonly, I would say that such a hernia comes when a chain smoker is operated on; then he coughs so hard so constantly that he breaks open his operative wound.

Other hernias can be repaired by bringing layers of muscle together and sewing them together. Many women have a sort of hernia through their "pelvic floor," after a hard childbirth — in which the muscles which make up the floor of the pelvis are torn apart. That allows the womb to go down, carrying with it, in front, the bladder, and behind, the rectum.

Such a weakened pelvic floor had best be repaired before the woman suffers for years, perhaps with difficulty in holding her urine, and perhaps difficulty in moving her bowels.

VITILIGO

Many people ask me about vitiligo. It is a white patch of skin in which the normal pigment has disappeared. So far as I can remember, I have never found anyone who could tell me just why the pigment goes. There are some medicines that sometimes have some effect in bringing pigment back, but so far as I can learn, in most cases they do not work well enough.

I think that usually the best thing that a person can do for vitiligo is to darken the areas each morning with a waterproof preparation such as Lydia O'Leary's "Covermark." Some physicians say they have painted the area with a weak solution of iodine, but if that were done every day, it might cause some trouble.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Today's deal is presented as a "mystery." You are informed that our South declarer committed an everyday run-of-the-mill type of error. It is your job as a bridge sleuth to bring South's mistake to light.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣

South's rebid of two no-trump was a distinct overbid, but he was confronted with a choice of inferior calls: either to pass two hearts, or to correct to two spades, North's first-bid suit. As it turned out, South's aggressiveness led to the excellent contract of three no-trump.

West chose to open a club, the only unbid suit, and East's nine was taken by South's 10. A low diamond was then led, dummy's jack winning. A diamond return was captured by West's ace, and a club was played back to the board's now-singleton ace.

It suddenly dawned on South that he couldn't get back to his own hand to cash his king of clubs and three established diamonds. He led a low spade off dummy, East taking the trick with his nine-spot. East now shifted to the jack of hearts, the board's king winning. When play had ended, declarer had gone down two tricks. Where did he slip?

Declarer's error came at trick one, when he accepted a "free" finesse by playing a low club off the board. In allowing the club lead to ride around to his 10, he destroyed his club king as the sole future entry to the South hand.

Had declarer counted his tricks when the dummy came into view, he would have perceived that the nine tricks were there for the taking. The opening club lead should have been captured by dummy's ace (forsaking the making of a third club trick). The jack of diamonds would be led next, and West's ace driven out.

Whatever West now played back, only an earthquake could prevent South from cashing one spade, two hearts, four diamonds and two clubs. But, unfortunately for South, he had his eye on the club suit, and not on the hand as a whole.

Fun with Figures

We have 3458 for the game today. Using all four digits each time, one of all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation (that's not the simple plus) or factorial symbols. Remember decimals, powers, and the root sign.

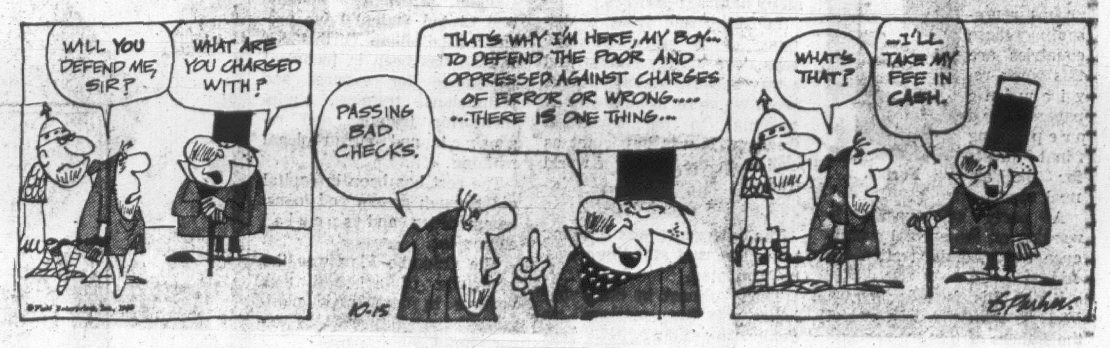

For example, 85 minus 3 plus 4 is a solution for 86. I found 107 tough, and the limit without a break seems to be 141. Free hints to help in future games will be sent on request, and I shall be glad to check solutions.

Oak Bay Resident Watched Birth of Colombo Plan

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Flags of member countries of the Colombo Plan are flying from tall standards in front of the legislative buildings. Conference groups representing these countries are this week reviewing papers and preparing final drafts for the annual report.

Forbes

A party of experts is working on the special conference topic Administration for Aid.

While this is going on, a Victoria man who was one of the fathers of this tremendous plan sits quietly in his home in the Uplands and waits for news to come to him in the papers, on radio and television.

Hon. R. W. Mayhew, former federal minister of fisheries, was present in Ceylon when the plan was born.

A few months later he headed a Canadian delegation to Australia when the plan was given shape and form. He was also in London, England, the same year, when the full organization came to life and the plan was made ready for operation in July, 1951.

★ ★ ★

I visited Mr. Mayhew on a sunny afternoon recently to listen as he reminisced a little about those historic days.

He represented Canada at sessions of the International Labor Organization in Mysore, India, late in December, 1949, then went on with external affairs minister Lester Pearson to Colombo, Ceylon, for a Commonwealth ministers' conference in January, 1950.

"At that conference everyone was concerned with the low standard of living and the many needs of the emerging countries," he told me. "We were groping for a way to assist in developiing their many natural resources."

Looking back from a distance of 19 years, Mayhew says, "we simply had to find a way because stability in the areas we were looking at was essential to the cause of freedom. It was important as well from the aspect of world trade."

★ ★ ★

The conference was drawing to a close and still there was no firm plan.

Then "almost in the dying hours of the sessions" a Ceylonese man, Mr. Jaywardene, put forward a loosely knit idea of asistance to the countries of south and southeast Asia.

"It was so good we took the rest of the day off to consider it", Mayhew remembers, "and convened again the next morning to discuss it in depth."

That morning an Australian named Spender "presented the idea in wider outline." It was adopted and a consultative committee was named.

"We went home to study the idea, to formulate program suggestions and to meet again for further discussion in Australia in May of that year."

Pearson had to attend a meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty in London in May. So it was Robert Mayhew who led the Canadian delegation "Down Under" where development programs were discussed and prepared.

Those programs, presented to the consultative committee in London in September, 1950, envisaged a total expenditure of $5 billion.

"That was considered a lot of money in those days." Mr. Mayhew reminds you.

Over the 19 years, six countries (Australia, Britain, Canada, Japan, New Zealand and United States) have provided $22.6 billion. Of this $990 million has been in technical assistance for experts and technicians, training, equipment for training and research and intra-regional training.

The rest has been in capital aid through grants and loans, commodities and special equipment.

The Colombo Plan was the beginning of a great new venture in democratic planning, Robert Mayhew tells you with quiet conviction.

In itself the idea of helping our neighbors was not new but the method by which such help would be extended was new.

★ ★ ★

He points out that "the first stage of our association with the countries of Asia was aggressive, imperialistic and military."

In the second stage it was "more peaceful but through tariffs, special preferences and stifling embargoes that smacked of threat and bribery."

Then, in the Colombo Plan "we accepted the idea of free and equal nations. A plan of co-operative assistance without interference in the domestic affairs of any country.

"It was the only approach that could count on the support of both the western and eastern worlds.

"We simply had to take it. And, you see, it has been a success."

HARBOR SECURITY HAS 'POLICE' LOOK

HALIFAX (CP) — National Harbors Board police are evolving from a simple security force to a full-fledged police force.

The change in responsibilities and attitudes is taking place across Canada as police apply the training they have undergone in classrooms and on the waterfront.

Alex Taylor, director of NHB police here, says the major problem has been to train the men into thinking like regular police officers.

Many of the 30 men on the force here have been on the waterfront most of their lives and know the stevedores, he says. It has been difficult to make them take a tougher line with the dock workers.

Last year the policemen were given an intensive training program including lectures and instructions from judges, lawyers and RCMP experts. They have just completed another training session covering the same ground.

"Throughout all the training we stress common sense and courtesy at all times," says Mr. Taylor. The men have found they get better results by using common sense rather than an official attitude.

Physical training proved to be the hardest for the men, many of whom had never been exposed to this aspect of police training.

Sgt. W. S. Taylor, a former wrestler, gave the men instruction in disarming holds, body throws and various submission holds.

The combination of classroom and gymnasium training appears to have given the men more interest in police work, says Staff Inspector E. L. Martin of Ottawa.

Law Probe Urges Ending Breach of Promise Suits

LONDON (CP) — Wandering Romeos get a lift today with a law commission recommendation that Britain abolish heartbalm suits.

Legislators have tried for 100 years to change the law which allows damages for broken engagements but governments have been reluctant to throw in their support.

The commission, headed by High Court Justice Leslie Scarman, said the time has come for a clean sweep, to rid the country of archaic breach-of-promise laws.

If the government accepts the recommendation, it will mean the fair English Rose no longer will be able to take her dazzling Romeo to court if he doesn't make good on his promise to wed.

MAY BE TROUBLE

Even gifts the couple exchanged during the passion of courtship may not be recoverable, though Scarman suggests that certain "conditional" gifts, such as the engagement ring, should be.

Under the existing law, a broken engagement can lead to court demands for damages for injury to feelings, reputation and matrimonial prospects.

In some cases the male in the case can obtain damages because his engaged girl ran off with another man. A judge, in assessing damages to a girl, may decide the amount by judging whether the girl's looks and age may make it harder for her to catch another suitor.

The commission concluded that the existing law gives the gold-diggers a golden opportunity. It also tended to force marriages between unhappy couples thereby undermining the marriage institution.

It was therefore important, said the commission, that the parties should be free to terminate an engagement and that the contractual effects of an agreement to marry should be eliminated.

Bastion Renovation Under Study

A technical committee of city council will take a look at a proposal to renovate the former Humber Building at 45 Bastion Square.

Fort Victoria Properties Ltd. plans to include boutiques, a restaurant and offices in the renovated building.

Tuesday morning the company asked the Community Development Committee for a seven-foot easement on to the square for stairwells in the renovated building.

Ald. Ian Stewart, who proposed the technical committee, said there should be a special committee to inspect the overall development of the square.

The request for an easement was not dealt with, the committee deciding that more information was needed.

Cambodia Gate Shown to ICC

SAIGON (Reuters) — Cambodia has asked the International Control Commission to leave the country because of financial arrears amounting to $120,000, diplomatic sources said here Tuesday.

The request came in a note from the head of state, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, to the Indian delegation in Phnom Penh, head of the three-nation body.

Eaton Century Special*

Mink

Full Length, Fully Let-Out Mink Coats – Ord. $1,388 to $1,588

Values are matchless in a raw fur market of rising prices. Designs are magnificent and superbly executed exclusively for Eaton's by the world's largest manufacturer of fur coats. In the group are sumptuous shawl collars, fashionable pockets and cuffs, and, of course, beautiful classics. Colours are breathtaking — Pastel, Dawn Pastel, Pearl and Dark Ranch—all natural mutation mink, specially bred to produce these most desirable shades. Every pelt has the clarity of colours, the rich gloss and the soft, lush hand that make this quality of mink so much admired. Skins in every coat are fully let-out, which means that each skin is cut into diagonal strips and then sewn together to make a long, narrow skin running the full length of the coat. Only fine pelts are chosen for this process, which requires highly skilled workmanship. A fully let-out coat displays the beauty of the fur to best advantage, drapes more luxuriously, is more supple and more durable. When you make such an important purchase as this, you wisely want assurance of excellent quality. That we give you confidently and without hesitation — and we back every mink with our famous guarantee: "Goods satisfactory or money refunded."

Millions Protest Viet War

End the War Or We Will —Protesters

One of the most brilliant and penetrating social critics and satirists in American journalism today, the Washington Post's Nicholas Von Hoffman gives this interpretation of the Moratorium on the Vietnam War which is receiving support from millions of his young, middle-aged and elderly fellow-countrymen today.

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

I've been asked to make speeches at a number of places today. I can't because I have to work. I think that everyone should refrain from working if he can; the two exceptions should be medical personnel and newsmen. If I had spoken, this is what it would have said:

The Moratorium isn't a protest. It's an ultimatum by an enormous section of the population laid down to its politicians. That ultimatum says there is no time left. It says there's no more credibility gap because there's no more credibility. It's an ultimatum that says either end the war forthwith or we will stop it ourselves.

That's not what the politicians want to make of this day. A man like Congressman Rogers C. B. Morton, the Republican national chairman, would have you believe, "I'm for the Moratorium as part of our right to assemble."

• • •

That's not what the Moratorium is about. The right to petition a government that rejects petitions before they're laid before it is a sterile right. It's using the forms of political process to frustrate their purpose. It's a con, a fancy way of saying, "You go ahead and exercise your God-given constitutional rights to be ineffectual while we go ahead and run the war."

Even before the McCarthy campaign, hope in the right of petition dies. On its better days the government rejected politics with the contention that the Rostows and Kissingers knew more and knew better. They know nothing, but that's another story. On its worst and more ordinary days, the government responded by tricks and falsifications ... pull out 3,000 men here, hide them under palm trees there, don't bomb this but bomb that, invent another round of fictitious secret peace talks, run and cry on U Thant's shoulder, get the Pope to hold your hand.

• • •

Now comes Sen. Fred Harris, the Democratic chairman, saying, "It's time to take the gloves off on the Vietnam war issue. It's nine months since the president took office." It was time to do that in Chicago, August 1968, when the senator and his friends kept the Democrats a war party and drove the Clean Gene kids and a lot of other people out of electoral politics. Today he wants to be a peacenik because he has a dawning fear that the people have had it up to their gezuk with this perpetual tragedy.

Every aspect of government, all three branches, have failed but not all men in government. Former Senators Morse and Gruening are charter members of the opposition. Fulbright may have helped vote us into this war and into the set of policies which make such conflicts as inevitable as they are recurring, but he's said he was wrong, unthinking and gulled.

We must accept that. This is no longer a small protest movement, and it's bad to get into the silly, purist radical bag of refusing to associate with anybody whose anti-war credentials are dated after 1964. This war has taught all of us many awful things about ourselves and our country. It's not just Sen. Fulbright who had to learn the hard way.

• • •

But if the few respectable men in high office could make such terrible mistakes, then the question is who should lead? Many speakers today will say the politicians, chastened, humbled, made honest and sensitive to the death of their constituents' sons and the voters high taxes. Don't you believe it. Don't let them steal the movement away.

The strength of the peace movement is its leaderlessness, the way it can survive and grow on a consensual process which is as easy to see as it's hard to describe with exactitude. Let the movement continue to be led as it has, by its adherents, by small groups of people proposing an

Canada, Vatican Exchange Envoys

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Canada and the Vatican have established diplomatic relations at ambassador level, the Vatican announced today.

The announcement said Canada's first ambassador to the Vatican will be John Cobbins, president of the University of Brandon, Manitoba.

The Vatican's apostolic nuncio—Ambassador—in Canada will be Msgr. Emmanuele Clarizio, the Pope's present representative in Ottawa.

The announcement said the decision to establish diplomatic relations was made in a desire to promote the friendly relations already existing between the two states.

The first official indication that Canada was considering extending diplomatic relations to the Vatican was given by Prime Minister Trudeau in Rome in January.

Trudeau, a Roman Catholic, told reporters after an audience with the Pope that the Canadian government was considering such a move but would first sound public opinion at home.

The Pope told Trudeau he would welcome such a development but that it was a matter for the Canadians alone to decide.

Aid Experts To Help B.C.

By JOHN MIKA

British Columbia's very own foreign aid program, announced in last spring's budget and still gestating, will get some midwifery hints from the Colombo Plan experts gathering here.

The count of delegates who have arrived for the 20-year-old mutual aid organization's meeting here rose to more than 60 today, mostly technical staffs from 24 countries engaged in closed-door talks.

The delegation leaders and other international figures arrive next week and that's when B.C. officials plan to hold general discussions with some of them.

However, the most detailed talks will be with Maurice Strong, president of the Canadian International Development Agency and the leading expert fielded by this country.

EARNED $225,000

The reason provincial officials are interested in the international meeting—aside from helping with hosting arrangements:

The $5 million perpetual fund for overseas assistance created by Premier Bennett in February's budget now has accumulated about $225,000 in interest income and the time has arrived for transforming spending ideas into policies.

Bennett last spring said the fund should earn an average of $350,000 a year for spending purposes.

He said the fund would be "much like" Canada's program of aid to the Colombo Plan.

Primary purpose will be to pay for sending B.C. experts, most from within government ranks, to developing countries to train their personnel in the education and, particularly, agriculture fields.

A secondary purpose will be to provide emergency relief funds for helping victims of foreign disasters.

The perpetual fund was an outgrowth of the World Relief

COMBAT SOLDIER SUPPORTS anti-war demonstrations in the United States by wearing black armband on patrol in Vietnam. First Lt. Jesse Rosen of New York says it's "just my way of silently protesting." U.S. Army has said it will investigate army protests. (AP Wirephoto)

Counter Signs Dot Country

Times News Services

Americans coast to coast stood up to be counted today as Vietnam Moratorium Day produced mostly orderly demonstrations, vigils, marches and debates.

But not all of the countless thousands who took part were protesting the Vietnam war. Across the country the moratorium produced some counter-displays in support of the U.S. military role in the war.

Demonstrations in Canada were few and there were no incidents locally. In Ottawa, about 50 people patrolled outside the U.S. Embassy with signs supporting the war protest.

Soldiers Wear Armbands

South of the border, major developments among moratorium supporters:

● Manhattan's city hall was draped in black on orders of Mayor John Lindsay. Many people wore black armbands and buttons in support of the peace day.

● At Washington's National Cathedral, clergymen offered prayers for peace every hour on the hour.

● Half of 30 troops in a combat platoon in Vietnam went on a mission wearing the black armbands.

Among incidents across the country in opposition to the moratorium:

● New York firemen defied Lindsay's proclamation and fire hall flags were not at half-mast.

● In Philadelphia, a transit operator draped his buses and trolleys with flags, claiming it was time citizens stood behind their country and stopped complaining.

Lists of Victims Read

Lists of Americans killed in Vietnam were read in several places—ranging from the steps of the administration building at Ohio State University in Columbus to Trinity Church in New York City's Wall Street financial district.

Students handed out moratorium and peace literature at Harvard Square in Cambridge, Mass., rallying point for a march to Boston Common. A 70-foot banner reading "Peace" was stretched across one street.

Economist John K. Galbraith, Canadian-born professor at Harvard University, told a rally of about 1,000 persons at the Harvard Business school he thinks ending the war now would bring the U.S. military establishment under control. Galbraith is a native of Iona Station, Ont.

Among those listening to Galbraith was George Cabot Lodge, son of Henry Cabot Lodge, chief U.S. peace negotiator in the Paris talks on Vietnam. The younger Lodge is an instructor at the business school.

Opposition to the moratorium, surfaced in many areas. Merritt H. Taylor Jr., president of the Philadelphia Suburban Transportation Co., draped his buses and trolleys with U.S. flags to

Mets in Saddle With Third Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief pitcher Pete Richert's wild throw to first that hit pinch-hitter J. C. Martin gave New York Mets a 2-1 triumph in the 10th inning over the befuddled Baltimore Orioles today and moved the Mets to within one victory of their first world championship.

Tom Seaver, the majors' top winner during the regular season with 25 victories, won his first Series game with a six-hitter to get revenge for his opening game defeat by Mike Cuellar.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead into the ninth on Donn Clendenon's second-inning home run but the Orioles struck back to tie in the ninth on singles by Frank Robinson and Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson's sacrifice fly on which Ron Swoboda made a diving catch.

Dick Hall took over for Eddie Watt, the second Oriole's pitcher, at the start of the Mets' 10th and went to a 3-2 count on Grote before the catcher hit a fly ball to short left. Don Buford apparently lost the ball in the sun and it fell just beyond the grasp of shortstop Mark Belanger for a two-base hit.

Martin squared away on Richert's first pitch and bunted the ball in front of the plate. Richert fielded the ball and threw toward first, but the ball hit the runner and rolled away into the hole toward second base.

Pinch-runner Rod Gaspar, running for Grote, scored all the way from second base while the joyful Martin hopped up and down on the base paths between first and second.

Ottawa Bans Seal Pup Hunting; Only 'Beaters' Will Be Taken

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will ban the hunting of seal pups in the Gulf of St. Lawrence next year, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis announced today.

The new policy means that only "beaters"—young seals three weeks to a month old which weigh up to 80 pounds—will be taken.

At a news conference, Mr. Davis acknowledged that the new regulations are at least in part a response to world-wide protests against the east coast seal hunt, mounted by humane societies and other organizations.

The ban will mean the end of hunting with clubs, an activity which humane groups have repeatedly complained about. The older seals, being more mobile, will necessitate the use of rifles.

Mr. Davis said negotiations are continuing with Norway with a view to agreement on a similar set of rules affecting the Labrador front.

Norway is the only other country which has been active in the northwest Atlantic harp seal fishery in recent years.

Canada will have jurisdiction over the Gulf of St. Lawrence next year through inland waters legislation now being prepared.

SEAL PUP
... an extra three weeks to live

However, its exclusive fishing limit extends only 12 miles off the coast of Labrador, and much of the seal harvest takes place beyond that point.

If a seal-hunting agreement were reached with Norway, Canada could take action under the Fisheries Act to regulate the operations of Canadian fishermen beyond the 12-mile limit.

However, Mr. Davis indicated such action would not be taken in the absence of an agreement with the Norwegians—which he said will not be achieved in time for next spring's fishery in any event.

The regulations announced today will not affect the total quota allowed by the fisheries department. It will remain at approximately 90,000 seals.

The beater seals are youngsters whose mothers have already left them. The name derives from the fact that they are ready to beat their own way northward.

They have shed the pure white coats that distinguish the younger seals. In the "white-coat" stage, the pups are still watched over by their mothers.

The Canadian hunt is confined solely to the taking of young seals.

Voice of the People?

THE COUNTRY-WIDE DEMONstrations and observances in the United States today in protest against continued American participation in the Vietnam war are of an impressive magnitude. Never in the United States has an anti-war—and anti-government—exhibition achieved a stature comparable with the mass excitement that in earlier days accompanied a declaration of war or the announcement of peace. Today's mass observance involves not only students and the sections of the population which might be expected to take part, but also many adult individuals and organizations, university faculties, businessmen and political figures.

The day's events will have importance for their specific objective: an early disengagement of United States forces from the Vietnam situation. And it is difficult to believe that President Nixon can hold entirely to his declared determination not to let the organized public outcry affect the government's policy. But quite apart from the immediate fact of the demonstrations and their effect on United States Vietnam participation, is the still larger question of the role of this type of expression of public opinion. Here is an unpredictable element injected into the democratic process and its impact and eventual influence could be great.

The traditional processes of the democratic system involve the free expression of individual opinion, the formation of committees or other bodies to give group support to such opinions, the holding of public meetings to place matters before the community and its elected representatives, the presentation of petitions, the sponsorship of candidates for office who support given policies, and finally the right to referendums and elections which will make clear the wishes of a majority of the people.

But the direct method of bringing pressure on the government by means of street demonstrations, mass rallies, patriotic observances of many kinds, is one that has been growing in frequency in a number of countries during the past decade. Coming particularly to wide public notice in the marches and other programs in support of Negro rights, the method has spread in the United States to embrace peace movements, youth movements and many other vehicles of protest.

While such demonstrations frequently are subverted by violence among those who need only an opportunity to run amok, they are increasingly being resorted to by more responsible citizens who see in them an outlet for direct and emphatic communication with government. A serious problem is thus posed, and it could be of watershed importance.

★ ★ ★

No government can effectively administer the affairs of a country by basing its actions primarily on the demands of street crowds, campus rallies and marches. But as these demonstrations increase in size and incorporate more and more of the responsible elements in the population, no government can remain aloof and unresponsive. The difficulty is to assess the degree to which the demonstrations legitimately represent the popular will, for presumably they will usually be staged by only a portion of the people.

This is the town meeting removed from the meeting hall and the control of a chairman and a modicum of parliamentary rules, and taken to the public squares and streets where excitement, emotion and often an electronically amplified demagogue are likely to be the major determinants of crowd action.

The streets are not likely to become a viable alternative for ballot boxes and considered decisions. But perhaps the rally is an inevitable result of the decline of indoor meetings, now that television has become a medium of direct communication between leaders and led. Democracy cannot thrive in a vacuum, or in individuals deprived of the sense of association derived from being one of an audience. If we are seeing the growth of a new sounding board for vox populi, then leaders both elected and appointed should seek to guide and employ it so that it will evolve in the best interests of democracy. It will be dangerous to ignore it, still more to reject it.

Time for Teamwork

ALTHOUGH THE VENTURE IS hidden in the usual Soviet official secrecy, the current simultaneous manoeuvring of seven Russian cosmonauts and four spacecraft appears to herald a multiple link-up of capsules and a start on the world's first space station.

If so, the Russian achievment will mark a long forward step in space exploration and development, for establishment of a launching platform outside of the atmosphere and beyond the main pull of the earth's gravity is said by many experts to be an essential preliminary to the transport of heavier cargoes to the moon and elsewhere in space.

The spectacular United States development of moon landings and on-the-spot exploration is equally a necessary part of man's thrust into the farther reaches of the solar system. Both types of program exhibit human courage and endurance, as well as high scientific and technological ability.

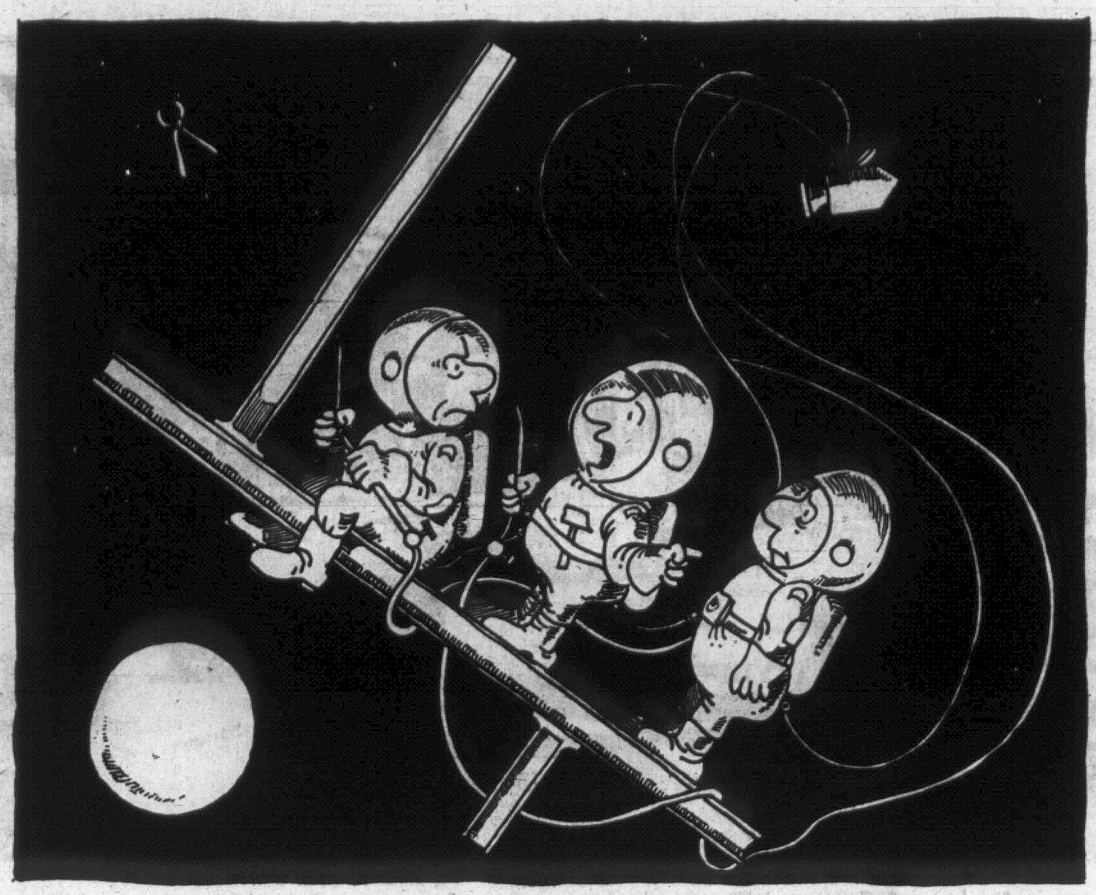

Given these two national programs, it is a pity that such complementary endeavors cannot be continued in a co-operative spirit rather than one of costly rivalry. There is much that each country can learn from the other. True science, which is said to observe no national boundaries, might in this instance help to overcome some.

A New Senate Image

IN CONTRAST TO THE CONventional talk of Senate reform, which keeps coming back like a yo-yo, is The Canadian Press report on a significant change that has occurred in recent times in the Red Chamber. Fighting the image of a retirement home for aging politicians, the Senate is, according to one observer, surging with new vitality. It is doing its committee work, providing the sober second thought for which it was designed in law making, and it seems to be energetically enthusiastic about getting down to work.

This should be highly encouraging to Canadians and should go a considerable distance to alter the public attitude which sees the Upper House as a comfortable pensioners' retreat for those who have labored in the partisan vineyard. Government Senate Leader Paul Martin sees a progressively more active and important role for the chamber.

So far, so good. But if the image is being altered, the mould appears to remain the same. And significant change can occur in the Senate only when membership is broadened. Whenever new senators are appointed, emphasis is laid on the contribution the new appointees have made to the country. By and large, good choices are made. Yet it is noticeable how often their merits happen to coincide with political affiliations linking them to the government in power. There are exceptions, of course, but they serve only to emphasize the exceptional in the general practice.

"... we should have known ... Comrade plumber has forgotten his tools ..."

FROM MONTREAL — By RICHARD PURSER

Angry, Frustrated Police, a Fearful Public

ONLY a week before Montreal's night of violence, October 7, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told graduates of the Quebec Police Institute that they must "make friends everywhere" as policemen. But Montreal police, much in need of friends, lost many of those they already had when they disappeared from the streets and left the city to the tender mercy of the dark forces that lurk in its sewers. It was grim to see the police themselves turn lawless, assembling en masse to scream defiance, waving placards calling for the mayor to be hanged, booing the chairman of the city's executive committee out of the hall, and finally turning on their own leader as a traitor when he told them in the end that the provincial government had won the first round and they would have to go back to work.

Purser

It was grim to see the city police turn against their own colleagues from the Quebec Provincial Police, who attempted to maintain some minimum of order while city police harassed them, hijacking their cars and then jumping on news photographers who photographed the incidents. There were moments when the definite possibility loomed of civil war between the two police forces.

Bertrand Warning

Etched on the mind here are the powerful words of Premier Bertrand, who said that when those professionals assigned by government to safeguard law and order themselves go against the law, "all authority must be taken away from them for the common good." There is no more unforgivable fault, he said, than the one now committed by the police before the eyes of those who scorn the very principles the police are supposed to apply.

In this era of confrontation, he said, "there are limits that even confrontation must not go beyond if we want democracy to continue."

This was not mere oratory. When Premier Bertrand made his plea to the National Assembly in Quebec after passage of the emergency legislation forcing police back to work, every member was acutely afraid that democracy in Quebec was under imminent threat.

The situation was so desperate that the government, without a peep of opposition from politicians of any political stripe, did things normally unthinkable in sovereignty-conscious Quebec—like calling in federal troops to act, if necessary, in a city under exclusively provincial jurisdiction. The troops are, in fact, on patrol in certain strategic locations such as the city hall and the city's main television transmitter — likely targets of the genuine revolutionaries whom the government believes surfaced, with some amount of organization, during the October 7 disturbances.

If the police had not obeyed the return-to-work order of the brutally severe Bill 61, and there were fears for some moments at the Paul Sauve arena that night that they might not, Montreal would be either in total chaos or under total martial law today. As it is, the city police are under provincial jurisdiction and the government is in no rush to hand authority back to the city administration. It wants to know why the city let its relations with policemen (and firemen) slip to where they now are, since the warning signs have been out for months.

Toronto Parity

Police frustration is total. Among policemen who will talk, there is no sign to be found that the force will ever accept the $8,480 salary (for first class constables with three years experience) granted by a supposedly legally binding arbitration board decision. They want $9,200, comparable with Toronto police salaries, and there is no telling what will happen if they do not get it after negotiators review the issue. City authorities are caught on the other horn of the dilemma — they don't want to appear to capitulate to illegal threats and actions.

But in this case, they may have no choice. Few citizens would deny, considering what police here have to face, they they deserve at least what their Toronto colleagues get. Even the head of the Toronto Metro Police Association agrees heartily with that, and police here were quite conscious of the virtues of inter-city police solidarity when they interrupted their noisy meeting to stand silent in memory of a slain Toronto officer.

Police here are bitter at the role they are increasingly forced into, of acting as balance of power between the forces of violence and the demand for order, between supporters of the status quo and militant reformers — a situation not uncommon in many cities of the United States, where the police have themselves tended to become a militant power in the absence of a clear understanding of their social role under new conditions. The city police have suffered nearly 300 injuries in five major disorders with revolutionary overtones since the Saint-Jean Baptiste Day riots of 1968. As the head of the Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood said:

"A feeling of apprehension has invaded Montreal — conditions are such that our men rightly become nervous when they are called out to riots."

Some order must be established in the Montreal situation, and it must include a decent restoration of police self-esteem as well as public confidence that authority will declare all-out war on the anarchist revolutionaries. They, in the words of one political leader, "are waiting for the day when they themselves, after having wrecked everything, will have the glorious opportunity of inflicting upon each of us a new kind of police of their choice" in what he called their "totalitarian democracy."

Levesque Blast

These were the words of separatist Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque, and they point up the danger of equating revolution with political separatism. Mr. Levesque since the Montreal disturbances has been loudly blasting leftist infiltrators in his own party, and union leaders who promote social conflict. Toleration of the conditions in Montreal, he said, would mean anarchy and the dislocation of all social organization.

It is hard to say what is most feared here: a leftist totalitarianism, or a rightist totalitarianism rising in reaction. The action of the Montreal mobs represents the former, the action of the police the latter.

Letters to the Editor

No Place But Up

Re the editorial of October 6, 1969, in reference to Jean Chretien:

The editorial is a clear indication of the lack of access to the public media to clearly put forth a fair assessment of the Indian peoples' point of view in reference to their own future.

I stand strong in my conviction that the Indian people of Canada are the ones who have been very patient in the light of new developments in Indian Affairs prepared by the Federal Government in isolation.

We have met with the Federal Government through their representatives over the last five years or more and the end result completely ignored the Indian peoples' priorities. It is political moves such as this and news media that blindly support such moves that force people to play the politics of the street and the threat that well meaning non-Indians may withdraw their support of Indian people is totally unfounded.

For well we know that if the Indian people lose their quest for justice, so will we all lose. What is on trial Mr. Editor, is British justice, not the Indian people and when you are on the very bottom, there is no place to go but up. — Chief Philip Paul, Tsartlip Band, Brentwood Bay.

Protest 'Trade'

The last executive meeting of the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association voiced a unanimous protest over the so called "trade" of Strathcona Park lands, for property at Cape Scott.

Being forced to accept the inclusion of Western Mines and subsequent pollution in the park area, it is sad to see further invasion arranged for, by the government. Surely here is failure to recognize priorities. Our parks are already priceless, and represent an irreplaceable heritage. Certainly they are not set aside simply for greedy eyes to evaluate the potential board footage available to industry. Availability and convenience to industry is poor excuse by the government, to whom we look for firm resistance to such pressures.

One wonders why announcement of this transaction was not released prior to the recent election, instead of after. — Mrs. H. R. Hanson, Publicity Chairman, TPNSA.

One Person's Meat

Re "Shame on Elizabeth Forbes" — what is one person's poison is another person's meat and it is a funny thing that the very column that offended one "Taxpayer" should have started another reading the same column regularly. —Still Another Taxpayer.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of Oct. 15, 1909.

Nanaimo has reorganized its women's hockey club and inter-city matches will be played with Victoria. The decision to reorganize the Nanaimo team was brought about through action taken by Victoria women's hockey club. Isabel Leeming, hon. secretary treasurer, wrote to the Nanaimo club secretary: "We are most anxious to form a league and we would like the Nanaimo team to be part of it. I am sure this would be mutually beneficial."

Fall Gales Strike Nixon

By TIM TRAYNOR
From Washington

THE atmosphere here has turned distinctly sour as the Nixon administration moves into its first autumn. The president finds himself in deepening conflict with the thrust of radicalism as it manifests itself in the less-than-revolutionary Washington forum. The administration's congressional backers have turned aside challenges to its military procurement plans, but the fight seems to have sharpened rather than dulled the challengers' appetite for "anti-militarist" confrontation. They are once again bringing their zeal to bear behind demands for action to end the Vietnam war.

Traynor

In the background, a series of smaller-scale but nasty incidents mars the scene. Influential Senate Republicans as well as Democrats have lined up against President Nixon's court nominee, Clement Haynsworth, following criticism of his financial dealings and his less-than-liberal attitude to integration and labor unions. There is criticism of the administration's civil rights posture in general, following the easing of pressure for school integration.

The air has been further tainted by the Green Beret affair—the arrest, and subsequent release, of special forces officers on charges of murdering a Vietnamese agent alleged to have been working for the Communists.

The release — in which the president was involved — coincided with seamy revelations about racketeering in U.S. military bases overseas. The congressional probe into what has become known as the "khaki Cosa Nostra" case has brought into question the role of top-ranking army officers.

Fulbright Support

But the redoubled outcry against the Vietnam war overrides all else. The arch-exponent of withdrawal, Senator William Fulbright, is once again in full spate — under his chairmanship the influential Senate committee on foreign relations will hold hearings on the administration's Vietnam policy at the end of October. A number of influential figures announced support of the nation-wide anti-war demonstration today. The president's disdain for the protest, expressed at a recent press conference, seems only to have increased support for it.

There will thus be anything but a moratorium on discussions on Vietnam, despite the president's request that such a moratorium be observed for a 60-day period. The most strident advocates of withdrawal — Sens. Fulbright, Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern — have served notice they are no longer willing to rely on his assurance that he is resolutely executing a plan for withdrawing, and bringing the war to an end.

The new upsurge of anti-war activity reflects the cautiousness of Mr. Nixon's policy of Vietnamizing the war, and of his preliminary troop withdrawals. The policy does not square with rapid and total disengagement, to the dismay of those who favor such a course. The aim is to prod Mr. Nixon into further movement and, beyond that, to prevent him from shifting into a new posture involving continued commitment at a lower level.

A protracted struggle now seems likely, and its terms are becoming clearer. The most aggressive anti-war leaders are bending all efforts to bring the Paris negotiations to a head, paving the way for an agreement under which the U.S. will be able to terminate its commitment once and for all. There is open pressure for a squeeze on the Thieu-Ky regime of South Vietnam—the belief being that it constitutes the major obstacle to a settlement. It is thought that rapid withdrawals of large numbers of American troops might force South Vietnamese leaders into line; otherwise there would have to be a direct American move to oust the regime.

Rearguard Action

The administration has apparently not given up hope of an effective rearguard action which would preserve the conditions for a more advantageous settlement. The process of transferring ground combat responsibilities to the South Vietnamese forces might be carried through to the point where American forces remained in a support capacity only — a group of perhaps 200,000. If successful, this might mean a sharp reduction of American casualties, while maintaining South Vietnamese fighting capacity, and thus bargaining power.

The administration has refrained from plotting a precise course, but the trend of thought can be inferred from recent statements by President Thieu and Vice-president Ky. In an interview with U.S. News and World Report, Air-Marshal Ky said South Vietnamese forces should be in a position to replace all U.S. ground combat forces by the end of 1970.

From the tone of their statements, it is obvious that Mr. Thieu and Air-Marshal Ky are alarmed at the renewed anti-war drive. The critics are emboldened by opinion surveys, which show close to 70 per cent of the American public now feel the U.S. made a mistake in entering the war. The central question now is: To what extent will the public back Mr. Nixon in resisting the drive for rapid disengagement? The polls show he has his work cut out for him. According to one poll, only 35 per cent of those sampled approved his handling of the war in September. The Gallup poll figure was 45 per cent, increasing to 52 per cent after the announcement of the September troop withdrawals.

Don't Pollute the Sewage By Flushing Away Pesticides

Some Victoria area residents are polluting their sewage and garbage.

Recent publicity over the dangers of certain pesticides has caused public concern to the point where householders are flushing chemicals down the toilet or putting them into garbage, the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health said in a public warning issued Tuesday.

"To prevent a serious situation which may arise from such practices, the B.C. department of agriculture has undertaken to accept and dispose of any unwanted pesticides," the board said.

•

The pesticides are toxic and flushing them down the toilet will simply spread them into the ocean, streams or ditch—wherever the sewer ends.

Putting them in the garbage is not as dangerous, because garbage is buried here. But some parts of the province don't bury garbage.

Unwanted pesticides could be left for disposal at the office of the district horticulturist, Douglas Building, or at any of the offices of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

•

The material must be packaged so contents won't escape. Leaking packages or containers will not be accepted.

Individuals who want to dispose of pesticides themselves should bury them in a hole two feet deep, well away from water sources, with a two-inch layer of lime below and above, with containers broken or pierced so that the lime and pesticide mix.

Among pesticide products which have caused recent concern are DDT, Aldrin, Dieldrin, Endrin and Heptachlor.

ABOUT $80,000 WORTH of electronic equipment sits at the back of the B.C. legislative chamber for the Colombo Plan Conference now in session. Sgt. R. C. Poulton of the department of national defence, one of five men who set up and maintain it, adjusts some of the equipment which records proceedings and provides French and English translations. Most delegates speak English, which is the official language of Colombo business, but delegates from Vietnam and Cambodia are French-speaking.

Health Board Wants Seven Hospitals Shut

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Seven older private hospitals in Greater Victoria should be closed, the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health was told Tuesday.

But because of the shortage of hospital beds in the area it will be necessary to keep them in operation for the next two or three years.

Senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said this morning he doesn't want to identify the older private hospitals until a joint survey by the health board staff and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service is complete.

But he promised they will be named in the report which should be presented to the next health board meeting in November.

Asked if they will be closed when sufficient public hospital beds are available, he said "absolutely, when sufficient continuing care beds are available."

He said there are roughly 200 patients in the seven hospitals.

DEPEND ON WELFARE

Whitbread said newer private hospitals can be more easily cleaned and maintained and they also have private patients who pay more than welfare patients, thus increasing hospital income.

The older smaller ones depend heavily on welfare patients for whom the fixed rate is $245 a month per person, paid by the welfare department.

He said such hospitals should have been closed down because of lack of facilities, the age of the buildings and the fact that it isn't worth the expenditure required for repainting and replacing linoleum.

"We have to go into the whole business and indicate to those responsible it is necessary to increase rates or we have to do something drastic and recommend their closure or that the welfare rate go up," he said.

RISING COSTS

A staff summary attached to the agenda of Tuesday's health board meeting said the Chinese Hospital, on Herald Street, has experienced "some difficulties" and this applied to other private hospitals in their attempts to meet rising wages and operating costs.

"There are seven private hospitals in the Greater Victoria area which are in a condition which would normally warrant that they discontinue operating as private hospitals," said the summary.

"Due to the shortage of beds, it will be necessary to keep these private hospitals operating for the next two or three years.

"A survey will be carried out by the Metropolitan Board of Health staff and BCHIS so that a report may be submitted indicating that other private hospitals may be in the same circumstances as the Chinese Hospital and, unless monies are available to keep up the facilities and pay satisfactory wages to the staff, some of these private hospitals may have to close down, thus causing a problem in the welfare departments to place these patients in other nursing homes or private hospital beds.

"It may be necessary to request the provincial welfare department to increase the monthly payment for welfare patients above the present $245 per month."

Put in Sewers Or Pay Heavily Board Warns

Property owners in the unorganized area west of Victoria could be hit for a whopping bill unless they approve piped sewers.

This message was given by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health Tuesday.

If sewers aren't approved, the cost could be 10 times as great, up to $1,200 a year per property.

A summary attached to the health board meeting agenda said the only answer to "many sewage nuisances" such as leakage into ditches and creeks is the construction of a sewerage system. Any action to correct existing nuisances would cost more than a sewerage system.

The summary also stated that if the referendum does not go through "it will be necessary for us to take court action under the sewage disposal regulations, requiring individual householders or operators of motels and trailer courts to install a satisfactory sewage disposal system, containing the effluent on the property.

"As indicated above, the cost would be far greater than the installation of a sewerage system. If action is taken, a court case may result in a $100 fine and $10 per day thereafter for as long as the condition exists."

Figures given to the meeting and from an engineering company put the cost of sewering View Royal at approximately $120 per property per year. A referendum is expected in December.

Sewage Trucks Expensive

Extension of this area from Parson's Bridge to Colwood Plaza and out to St. Mary's Priory would raise the cost in Colwood to about $160.

But a further extension to the residential area around Jacklin Road in Langford would bring in more properties and reduce the sum back to $120.

The alternative costs to sewers were mentioned by Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer. Remedying existing sources of pollution could require holding tanks plus trucking away of sewage effluent.

Tanks would cost several hundred dollars and trucking costs could be as high as $100 a month, or $1,200 a year.

Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, chairman of Saanich Peninsula School Board, said it is costing the board $7,000 for a 10-month contract to haul sewage effluent from two schools alone.

The board was told that View Royal fire district is proposing a referendum on sewerage this December. The system would use the rebuilt Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt. The possibility existed of a referendum also happening in Colwood and Langford.

Health Inspector Laurel Benham said "unfortunately Langford and Colwood have very short notice to attempt the same thing in their area, for their fire trustees to agree to be the sewerage agency. I hope they are successful."

He said if there is not a successful referendum in Langford and Colwood, "it would appear that it will be about 1985 before the (new) outfall south of Esquimalt Lagoon will be provided.

"In that case there is the problem of what we are going to do with corrections. It will be very costly — it will far exceed the cost in a sewerage system. Trucking and hauling are the only solutions in some places."

He also said a number of properties are contributing to land pollution, with sewage flowing into ditches, Esquimalt Harbor and Craigflower Creek.

"There are too many to be ignored and they are spotted all over the territory," he said.

The health board agreed to issue a public statement on the costs of sewerage and cleaning up present problems.

Underground Phone Wires Spread Out

The second phase of a $6 million B.C. Tel program for Oak Bay and Saanich will begin before the end of the year when new underground ducts and conduit will be laid.

Oak Bay's works and maintenance committee approved the company's plans on Tuesday.

Beginning at the new B.C. Tel building on Foul Bay, underground wiring eventually will run to Oak Bay Avenue, along it and Newport to Currie and Windsor Park.

Company spokesman Glynn Jones said today they will be pulling in cable to underground ducts early next year.

TOWER SITTER TO GET LIFT . . . MUSICALLY

To the clang of firebells, Earl Levy will be driven through town Saturday en route to skyborne isolation for the next few weeks.

Beginning at 11 a.m., members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will carry Levy around town in their "fire engine."

Then, at the Mayfair Shopping Centre, they will hoist Levy by ladder to the clock tower where he's volunteered to stay until the current United Red Feather-Red Cross campaign meets its target for the year.

Levy is the well-known doorman at a local motel.

Moderator Of Church To Visit

The new moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada makes his first official visit to Victoria Thursday and will address a public meeting and the Victoria Council of churches at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. Edward H. Johnson, after calling on Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson, will address a public meeting at 1:15 p.m. in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Johnson has been overseas secretary of the board of missions since 1954 and was the first Canadian to penetrate the blockade in Nigeria-Biafra war.

He will discuss the Nigerian conflict in his speech.

This Club Draws Teenagers

They're Given Plenty to Do

By SUSAN MAYSE

The car on the hoist is 15 years old, but by the time its engine, transmission, and brakes are painstakingly restored, it may rattle on for another 15.

Buying, repairing, and endlessly tinkering on an old car is the dream of thousands of Victoria boys. Only a few can realize it, even if they scrape together enough cash for a clunker.

Automotive tools are expensive—and it's almost impossible to do most jobs with hit-or-miss methods, tools, and garage.

1,000 MEMBERS

That's one reason the Victoria Boys' Club can boast an enthusiastic membership of nearly 1,000 teenaged boys . . . and girls.

Their car repair shop, equipped with tools and space to make most repairs, is popular with boys 16 to 18, says director Robert Boettger.

A volunteer instructor demonstrates once or twice a week the correct way of doing repairs and tuning, and fixing a car can cost a boy as little as the price of a set of plugs.

Somewhere in a rabbit warren of small rooms upstairs, a radio room strewn with disembowelled televisions, radios, and mysterious electronic gadgetry attracts crowds of younger boys, 13 to 15 years old.

STEADY USE

A photography room equipped for all stages of developing and printing varies in popularity, but the gym and weights room are in almost constant use during the club's open hours after school, evenings, and weekends.

Senior and junior lounges, craft rooms, a woodworking shop, and a library are all part of the club's new addition, completed in 1968.

Instructors show the boys techniques of hobbies and sports from painting to gymnastics.

The club provides activities, sports, and companionship for youngsters whose parents can't afford to enroll them in more expensive clubs.

"The Victoria Boys' Club isn't restricted to kids without a pocketful of money, though," says Boettger. "Our members and our volunteers come from every part of town. There are no restrictions on our membership here."

Most live half a mile to three-quarters of a mile from the Yates Street location of the club—an area that includes in its radius many of the low-income homes of Victoria.

Membership costs $1 a year for 8 to 12-year-olds, and $2 a year for 12 to 18-year-olds, Boettger said.

In addition to regular activities a community development worker hired for the club with City of Victoria funds goes into city parks and schools, mostly at night, to reach youngsters who won't join a club.

TALK IT OVER

The worker reaches the "tough" element by talking problems out with them in their own areas, and frequently bringing them into the club after hours to use the facilities in a non-pressure atmosphere.

The cost of the year-old building is a burden to the club, and new ideas will be limited by the amount of money the United Red Feather-Red Cross appeal can give the club.

A high percentage of the annual expenses are paid by the United Appeal campaign, and appeal organizers hope to absorb the entire cost of the club—about $50,000 annually—as soon as possible.

MAJOR EXTENSION SET FOR GALLERY

A major extension to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria will be announced at the gallery members' annual meeting Oct. 24.

Gallery director Colin Graham said no information on the extension will be issued before the general meeting.

In a newsletter to members, president R. M. Lane described the extension as "a major new phase in the development of the institution."

He said the announcement would be "the most important one we have made in the past decade."

Arthur Mayse . . .

THERE WAS A TIME, and I can't remember it without a shudder, when such British Columbia wines as the liquor stores carried were popskull of the wildest sort. But that situation has changed for the better, as increasing numbers of Victorians have discovered.

A while ago, we were introduced to a medium dry red wine that was notably pleasant to the taste-buds, and it's no trick at all to find a sparkling white or a rose that is more than merely palatable.

★

This isn't to suggest that the vineyards of France need fear competition from ours. However, occasional samplings have convinced me that B.C. wines now owe nothing in quality to those produced in Australia, South Africa, California, or the Canadian East.

Although this is still prevailingly beer and hard liquor country, it interests me to note that the juice of the Okanagan grape has achieved a large measure of respectability. Hosts who wouldn't have dreamed of pouring a B.C. wine for their guests 10 years ago now do so quite casually.

★

I'm not influenced by local patriotism in offering this amateur taster's estimate, and by no means all of our wines deserve praise.

Some you may like, and some you won't. As insurance against that last, it's better to experiment with wines in small bottles where possible.

UNTIL THREE WEEKS ago, my wife and I spoke the same language. Then communication difficulties developed, and the gap in understanding widens each Tuesday evening. That's when Win joins a group of linguistic adventurers committed to an adult education course in Japanese conversation.

After the first lesson, I called around for my dear one at Central Junior secondary. She looked more than a little bemused, but her greeting was cheerful.

"Ohio guziamus," she said . . . at least, it sounded like that.

I gave her back a startled, "Huh?"

"I'm sorry," she said. "That was good morning. I should have said 'kumban wa'. That means 'good evening.'

"Well," I said, taking off from the curb with something of a jerk, "there's nothing like jumping in and getting your feet wet."

★

On the way home, Win got in some vocabulary practice, and passed on what she had learned about the polite language.

It wasn't a great deal—after all, this was only the first lesson—but she had plainly enjoyed the session, and I decided to tag along.

That hope ended when I gave her a playback of what I'd picked up in transit.

"I don't want to hurt your feelings," she said, "but my pronunciation's shaky enough as it is. Maybe you'd better stick to English."

★

This I've done, sulkily, through the aftermath of two more lessons, contenting myself with such interpretation as is offered.

Example: "In Japanese, you wouldn't say, "I am going', but 'Going is taking place.' "

And another: "We'd say, 'That's a pen.' In Japanese, it's 'The thing that goes around being a pen.' "

At least, in my role of the party who goes around playing second fiddle to textbook and tape recorder, I am realizing just how difficult our own confusing language must be to those faced with the task of learning it.

At least as hard as Japanese, and nothing like as polite!

TAKE A RAINY NIGHT OF the sort not unknown in Victoria—toss in the glitter, shimmer and sudden blaze of light on shiny-wet blacktop—and a grim sort of guessing game develops.

It's akin to blindman's buff, and its name is 'find the centre-line."

The players are any number of drivers. The penalty for a wrong guess could be anything from a donged fender to a session in hospital, or worse.

★

Admittedly, our streets take a lot of wear, and some much more than others. But surely it isn't too much to expect that when centre-lines wear out, those responsible for the upkeep of these essential traffic guides should see to their renewal.

All through this town and its environs, you will find examples of what I mean. And why so obvious a threat to driver and passenger safety is so badly neglected beats me!

Last Reformer Loses His Post

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Josef Smrkovsky, a leading and popular Czechoslovak reformer, was ousted today as chairman of one of the two houses of the Federal Assembly as a session of the legislature began in Prague Castle.

At a meeting of the House of the People and the House of Nations later in the day, former Communist leader Alexander Dubcek also will be removed as chairman of the entire parliament.

The Czech news agency CTK reported this morning that Smrkovsky submitted in writing his acceptance of a party decision last month ordering Communist deputies to remove him from his parliamentary functions.

The Communist party newspaper Rude Pravo reported today that both Dubcek and Smrkovsky had accepted the party's decision to remove them from their Federal Assembly posts—Smrkovsky was first deputy chairman—at a meeting of Communist assemblymen Tuesday.

Rude Pravo said they had surrendered their membership in the presidium, and formal removal from the jobs—the last held by the leaders of the 1968 reform movement—was to come today.

DEPUTY OUSTED TOO

Smrkovsky's deputy, Marie Mikova, an active progressive, was also dismissed as deputy chairman of the House of the People and wrote in her acceptance with the party decision.

The second deputy chairman of the House, Josef Valo, said a new chairman would be elected later in the session.

A surprise came with the request of Dr. Dalibor Hanes, chairman of the House of Nations, to be relieved of his post.

He has not come under fire and was not scheduled to be ousted like Dubcek, Smrkovsky and Mrs. Mikova.

For Dubcek, who as party leader gave his countrymen a taste of liberalism and a chance to enjoy "socialism with a human face," removal from the assembly chairmanship means virtually the end of a political career that skyrocketed early in 1968 and has waned since the August, 1968, invasion by Warsaw pact troops.

YIELDED TO HUSAK

He hung on as party chief until April 17 this year, when under continuing pressure from conservatives, he yielded to Dr. Gustav Husak.

A month ago, the central committee removed him from the party presidium and ordered his ouster from the federal assembly. The only threat still connecting him with the powers that now rule the country is his seat in the 135-member party central committee.

Purges Monday claimed the membership in the Communist party of the architect of the 1968 economic reforms, Prof. Ota Sik. He was expelled for what were termed violations of party discipline and the duties of a Czechoslovak citizen.

But Husak promised that there would be no political trials of leaders of the 1968 reform movement.

"Nothing is being construed against individuals," he said. "There is no return to the er-

Former MLA A. S. Matthew Dies at 85

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alex S. Matthew, veteran B.C. politican and former deputy speaker, died Saturday at the age of 85.

Mr. Matthew was Social Credit MLA for Vancouver Centre from 1953 to 1966 when he lost out to the present member, Evan Wolfe, at a nominating meeting.

For nine years during his political career he was deputy speaker of the house and chairman of the Private Bills Committee.

Born in Brechin, Scotland, Mr. Matthew came to Canada in 1908 as the Canadian manager of an English insurance firm in Montreal. Two years later he moved in to Vancouver and founded his own insurance company, A. S. Matthew and Co. Ltd., which he operated until its sale in 1946.

Mr. Matthew joined the Social Credit party in 1952 and this interest in politics led to his 13 years as an MLA.

Among his greatest interests as an MLA was the cause of old age pensioners. He also served on the committee which improved the Workmen's Compensation Act and with his then running mate, Les Peterson, presently attorney-general, he sponsored the Fair Employment Act.

At the time of his death in St. Paul's Hospital, after a short illness, Mr. Matthew was managing director and secretary of the Notaries Public Society of B.C.

He was a life member and past president of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society of B.C., a member of the Central Lions Club, and a life member of the Pacific National Exhibition.

Other affiliations included the United Nations Association in Canada, HMCS Discovery Wardroom, the Union Club of Victoria, Gizeh Shrine Temple, BPOE, and the Muscular Distrophy Society.

Mr. Matthew, 2323 West Second, is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Beverley Turner of Saskatoon; three grandchildren.

Funeral will be held Thursday at 1 p.m. at Mount Pleasant Chapel with Rev. Duncan Chalmers officiating. Burial will follow at the Masonic Cemetery, Burnaby.

Bonaventure Seen In Peace Role

TORONTO (CP) — Former CBC newscaster Stanley Burke said Tuesday that the Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure, scheduled to be retired next April, should be used to help peace efforts in the Nigerian-Biafran war.

Mr. Burke told the Royal Commonwealth Society that the carrier could be converted into a base for peace negotiations and relief supply movements.

He said the Bonaventure should have its decommission date advanced so it can be used as soon as possible as "a ship of peace."

Mr. Burke left his job at the CBC to campaign for an end to the war.

It sounds more like mayhem than a gallery opening, but the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria is going to turn on tonight with all the noise, light and walk-through whimsies of the electronic age.

A Canada Council grant is making the opening, "intermedia" show possible, the Gallery says. The display is scheduled for 9:45 p.m.

Wages Issue In Strike Of Dustmen

Times News Services

LONDON — The basic issue in the continuing strike of garbagemen here is pay, and no settlement is yet in sight.

Dustmen, as they're called, at present earn about £15 9d ($40.17 in Canadian funds). They are seeking an increase to £20.

The average wage for a manual laborer in London is £21 ($54.60) but laborers on construction jobs frequently earn more.

Alberta Cities Vote Today

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Voters in seven of Alberta's nine cities go to the polls today. Four will elect mayors, five will choose councillors and two will vote on plebiscites. There are no elections in Edmonton or Wetaskiwin.

Calgary, Red Deer, Drumheller and Camrose will elect mayors. Calgary, Drumheller, Lethbridge, Grande Prairie and Medicine Hat will fill their councils.

All terms will be for two years and in 1971, all nine cities will hold elections with posts to be held for three years.

In Calgary, the three-way mayoralty battle has Jack Leslie seeking re-election against opponents Alfred Harris and Rod Sykes.

In Drumheller, Michael Danyluk is trying to unseat Mayor Eneas A. Tosach.

In Camrose, Rudy Swanson and William Fowler are seeking the mayor's job. The incumbent, Dr. F. M. Smith, is not seeking re-election.

In Red Deer, Mayor R. Edward Barrett faces challenges from Peter Schneider and Dr. Robert Bannister.

In the fights for council seats, Lethbridge, Grande Prairie and Medicine Hat will elect four. Fifteen men are running for three Calgary council seats. In Drumheller, voters will choose five members of council from 16 candidates.

Millions Protest Viet War

★ ★ ★

End the War Or We Will —Protesters

One of the most brilliant and penetrating social critics and satirists in American journalism today, the Washington Post's Nicholas Von Hoffman gives this interpretation of the Moratorium on the Vietnam War which is receiving support from millions of his young, middle-aged and elderly fellow-countrymen today.

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

I've been asked to make speeches at a number of places today. I can't because I have to work. I think that everyone should refrain from working if he can; the two exceptions should be medical personnel and newsmen. If I had spoken, this is what it would have said:

The Moratorium isn't a protest. It's an ultimatum by an enormous section of the population laid down to its politicians. That ultimatum says there is no time left. It says there's no more credibility gap because there's no more credibility. It's an ultimatum that says either end the war forthwith or we will stop it ourselves.

That's not what the politicians want to make of this day. A man like Congressman Rogers C. B. Morton, the Republican national chairman, would have you believe, "I'm for the Moratorium as part of our right to assemble."

• • •

That's not what the Moratorium is about. The right to petition a government that rejects petitions before they're laid before it is a sterile right. It's using the forms of political process to frustrate their purpose. It's a con, a fancy way of saying, "You go ahead and exercise your God-given constitutional rights to be ineffectual while we go ahead and run the war."

Even before the McCarthy campaign, hope in the right of petition dies. On its better days the government rejected politics with the contention that the Rostows and Kissingers knew more and knew better. They know nothing, but that's another story. On its worst and more ordinary days, the government responded by tricks and falsifications ... pull out 3,000 men here, hide them under palm trees there, don't bomb this but bomb that, invent another round of fictitious secret peace talks, run and cry on U Thant's shoulder, get the Pope to hold your hand.

• • •

Now comes Sen. Fred Harris, the Democratic chairman, saying, "It's time to take the gloves off on the Vietnam war issue. It's nine months since the president took office." It was time to do that in Chicago, August 1968, when the senator and his friends kept the Democrats a war party and drove the Clean Gene kids and a lot of other people out of electoral politics. Today he wants to be a peacenik because he has a dawning fear that the people have had it up to their gezuk with this perpetual tragedy.

Every aspect of government, all three branches, have failed but not all men in government. Former Senators Morse and Gruening are charter members of the opposition. Fulbright may have helped vote us into this war and into the set of policies which make such conflicts as inevitable as they are recurring, but he's said he was wrong, unthinking and gulled.

We must accept that. This is no longer a small protest movement, and it's bad to get into the silly, purist radical bag of refusing to associate with anybody whose anti-war credentials are dated after 1964. This war has taught all of us many awful things about ourselves and our country. It's not just Sen. Fulbright who had to learn the hard way.

• • •

But if the few respectable men in high office could make such terrible mistakes, then the question is who should lead? Many speakers today will say the politicians, chastened, humbled, made honest and sensitive to the death of their constituents' sons and the voters high taxes. Don't you believe it. Don't let them steal the movement away.

The strength of the peace movement is its leaderlessness, the way it can survive and grow on a consensual process which is as easy to see as it's hard to describe with exactitude. Let the movement continue to be led as it has, by its adherents, by small groups of people proposing an

Canada, Vatican Exchange Envoys

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Canada and the Vatican have established diplomatic relations at ambassador level, the Vatican announced today.

The announcement said Canada's first ambassador to the Vatican will be John Cobbins, president of the University of Brandon, Manitoba.

The Vatican's apostolic nuncio—Ambassador—in Canada will be Msgr. Emmanuele Clarizio, the Pope's present representative in Ottawa.

The announcement said the decision to establish diplomatic relations was made in a desire to promote the friendly relations already existing between the two states.

The first official indication that Canada was considering extending diplomatic relations to the Vatican was given by Prime Minister Trudeau in Rome in January.

Trudeau, a Roman Catholic, told reporters after an audience with the Pope that the Canadian government was considering such a move but would first sound public opinion at home.

The Pope told Trudeau he would welcome such a development but that it was a matter for the Canadians alone to decide.

Counter Signs Dot Country

Times News Services

Americans coast to coast stood up to be counted today as Vietnam Moratorium Day produced mostly orderly demonstrations, vigils, marches and debates.

But not all of the countless thousands who took part were protesting the Vietnam war. Across the country the moratorium produced some counter-displays in support of the U.S. military role in the war.

Demonstrations in Canada were few and there were no incidents locally. In Ottawa, about 50 people patrolled outside the U.S. Embassy with signs supporting the war protest.

Soldiers Wear Armbands

South of the border, major developments among moratorium supporters:

● Manhattan's city hall was draped in black on orders of Mayor John Lindsay. Many people wore black armbands and buttons in support of the peace day.

● At Washington's National Cathedral, clergymen offered prayers for peace every hour on the hour.

● Half of 30 troops in a combat platoon in Vietnam went on a mission wearing the black armbands.

Among incidents across the country in opposition to the moratorium:

● New York firemen defied Lindsay's proclamation and fire hall flags were not at half-mast.

● In Philadelphia, a transit operator draped his buses and trolleys with flags, claiming it was time citizens stood behind their country and stopped complaining.

Lists of Victims Read

Lists of Americans killed in Vietnam were read in several places—ranging from the steps of the administration building at Ohio State University in Columbus to Trinity Church in New York City's Wall Street financial district.

Students handed out moratorium and peace literature at Harvard Square in Cambridge, Mass., rallying point for a march to Boston Common. A 70-foot banner reading "Peace" was stretched across one street.

Economist John K. Galbraith, Canadian-born professor at Harvard University, told a rally of about 1,000 persons at the Harvard Business school he thinks ending the war now would bring the U.S. military establishment under control. Galbraith is a native of Iona Station, Ont.

Among those listening to Galbraith was George Cabot Lodge, son of Henry Cabot Lodge, chief U.S. peace negotiator in the Paris talks on Vietnam. The younger Lodge is an instructor at the business school.

Opposition to the moratorium, surfaced in many areas. Merritt H. Taylor Jr., president of the Philadelphia Suburban Transportation Co., draped his buses and trolleys with U.S. flags to Aid Experts To Help B.C.

By JOHN MIKA

British Columbia's very own foreign aid program, announced in last spring's budget and still gestating, will get some midwifery hints from the Colombo Plan experts gathering here.

The count of delegates who have arrived for the 20-year-old mutual aid organization's meeting here rose to more than 60 today, mostly technical staffs from 24 countries engaged in closed-door talks.

The delegation leaders and other international figures arrive next week and that's when B.C. officials plan to hold general discussions with some of them.

However, the most detailed talks will be with Maurice Strong, president of the Canadian International Development Agency and the leading expert fielded by this country.

EARNED $225,000

The reason provincial officials are interested in the international meeting—aside from helping with hosting arrangements:

The $5 million perpetual fund for overseas assistance created by Premier Bennett in February's budget now has accumulated about $225,000 in interest income and the time has arrived for transforming spending ideas into policies.

Bennett last spring said the fund should earn an average of $350,000 a year for spending purposes.

He said the fund would be "much like" Canada's program of aid to the Colombo Plan.

Primary purpose will be to pay for sending B.C. experts, most from within government ranks, to developing countries to train their personnel in the education and, particularly, agriculture fields.

A secondary purpose will be to provide emergency relief funds for helping victims of foreign disasters.

The perpetual fund was an outgrowth of the World Relief

Mets in Saddle With Third Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief pitcher Pete Richert's wild throw to first that hit pinch-hitter J. C. Martin gave New York Mets a 2-1 triumph in the 10th inning over the befuddled Baltimore Orioles today and moved the Mets to within one victory of their first world championship.

Tom Seaver, the majors' top winner during the regular season with 25 victories, won his first Series game with a six-hitter to get revenge for his opening game defeat by Mike Cuellar.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead into the ninth on Donn Clendenon's second-inning home run but the Orioles struck back to tie in the ninth on singles by Frank Robinson and Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson's sacrifice fly on which Ron Swoboda made a diving catch.

Dick Hall took over for Eddie Watt, the second Oriole's pitcher, at the start of the Mets' 10th and went to a 3-2 count on Grote before the catcher hit a fly ball to short left. Don Buford apparently lost the ball in the sun and it fell just beyond the grasp of shortstop Mark Belanger for a two-base hit.

Martin squared away on Richert's first pitch and bunted the ball in front of the plate. Richert fielded the ball and threw toward first, but the ball hit the runner and rolled away into the hole toward second base.

Pinch-runner Rod Gaspar, running for Grote, scored all the way from second base while the joyful Martin hopped up and down on the base paths between first and second.

Ottawa Bans Seal Pup Hunting; Only 'Beaters' Will Be Taken

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will ban the hunting of seal pups in the Gulf of St. Lawrence next year, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis announced today.

The new policy means that only "beaters"—young seals three weeks to a month old which weigh up to 80 pounds—will be taken.

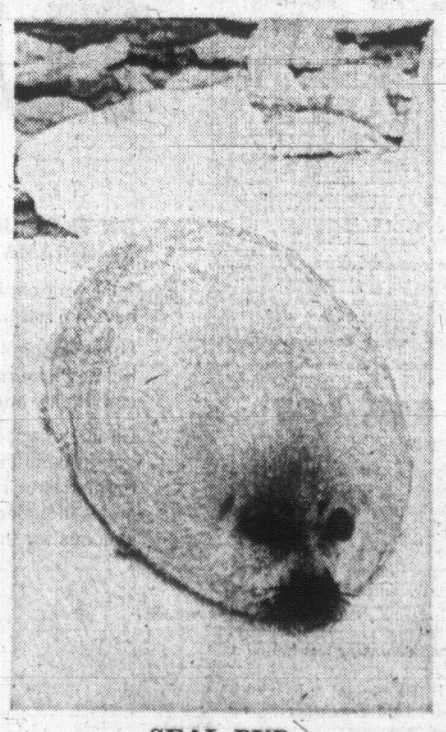

At a news conference, Mr. Davis acknowledged that the new regulations are at least in part a response to world-wide protests against the east coast seal hunt, mounted by humane societies and other organizations.

The ban will mean the end of hunting with clubs, an activity which humane groups have repeatedly complained about. The older seals, being more mobile, will necessitate the use of rifles.

Mr. Davis said negotiations are continuing with Norway with a view to agreement on a similar set of rules affecting the Labrador front.

Norway is the only other country which has been active in the northwest Atlantic harp seal fishery in recent years.

Canada will have jurisdiction over the Gulf of St. Lawrence next year through inland waters legislation now being prepared.

SEAL PUP
... an extra three weeks to live

However, its exclusive fishing limit extends only 12 miles off the coast of Labrador, and much of the seal harvest takes place beyond that point.

If a seal-hunting agreement were reached with Norway, Canada could take action under the Fisheries Act to regulate the operations of Canadian fishermen beyond the 12-mile limit.

However, Mr. Davis indicated such action would not be taken in the absence of an agreement with the Norwegians—which he said will not be achieved in time for next spring's fishery in any event.

The regulations announced today will not affect the total quota allowed by the fisheries department. It will remain at approximately 90,000 seals.

The beater seals are youngsters whose mothers have already left them. The name derives from the fact that they are ready to beat their own way northward.

They have shed the pure white coats that distinguish the younger seals. In the "white-coat" stage, the pups are still watched over by their mothers.

The Canadian hunt is confined solely to the taking of young seals.
